Italy to Seek German Pact Unless France Drops Curbs

Warns She Will Leave League if Demand Is Turned Down.

Duce Not Bluffing, Leaders Convinced

French Coal Miners Join in Strike; Seize Chiefs, Then Free Them.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 8.—Italy officially warned France she would leave the League of Nations immediately and seek an alliance with Germany unless a move is made to lift sanctions at the next Geneva meeting, diplomats said tonight.

The Italian Ambassador to Paris delivered the warning in a verbal communication to the French foreign office, and added:

"Italy hopes France will not assume an attitude at Geneva which would create an impossible situation for Italian honor."

Most of France's diplomatic representatives in Europe were called back to Paris by the new government and will confer this week with Yvon Delbos, foreign minister.

The Italian ambassador, Vittorio Cerruti, was understood to have informed the foreign office that Italy has not made any definite move toward a German alliance, and would prefer not to take such a step.

Will Be Forced to Act.

Italy will be forced to do so, however, unless France acts to remove sanctions, Cerruti was reported to have stated.

Informed persons said the French government was convinced Premier Mussolini was not bluffing, especially since he has carried out all his previous threats in the Italo-Ethiopian situation.

Premier Leon Blum has been represented as favoring the removal of sanctions, although he is said to be anxious to reconcile such action with Socialist doctrine and is determined that any move should be in concert with Great Britain.

One reason why France may be inclined to act in accordance with Italy's reported demand, informed sources said, was that the Little Entente states—Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania—have insisted on French leadership in international problems.

These nations, allies of France, have indicated they will be forced to drift toward a powerful bloc consisting of Germany, Italy, Poland, Austria and Hungary, which they believe would be created if France does not assume this role.

Miners Join Strike.

Meanwhile, France's strike focus turned underground to the coal pits of 150,000 miners.

With the Federation of Labor urging 1,000,000 other workers to return to their jobs under terms of a "proletarian victory" agreement, the coal-diggers of northern France called a general strike.

They said they could not live on wages of 594 francs (about $40) a month, and charged French workings were idle and French miners unemployed in the north while owners gave work to German diggers in the Saar.

The owners, declaring the market depressed, insisted work was distributed equally when there was any.

Officials Held Prisoner.

In some places mine officials were held prisoner for a while, but leaders of the workers ordered them freed.

Scattered new strikes also were called in the Paris building trades, in the Rouen industrial area and on the docks at Dunkerque, but generally the "folded-arms" strikers were straggling back to their work.

The government announced tonight that white-collar workers, however, are "still far from agreement" with their employers on the question of salaries after more than

Roosevelt Refuses To Save Kidnaper

Arthur Gooch, a former butcher boy who stumbled into a trap laid by Federal agents after he and a companion kidnaped two Oklahoma policemen, was denied clemency by President Roosevelt yesterday.

A terse announcement from the Department of Justice gave word of the President's refusal to commute the death sentence to life imprisonment.

In McAlester, Okla., where Gooch awaits execution on the gallows June 19, he calmly accepted news of the President's action. According to the Associated Press, he said:

"You won't find me afraid to die when the time comes. Death is death. It's something we want to miss as long as we can, but something we should face with our chin up."

Gooch is 27 years old. His last hope rested with the White House.

Gooch and Ambrose Nix, wanted for robbery after a jail break at Holdenville, Okla., were found at a gas station November 26, 1934, by Policemen R. N. Baker and H. R. Marks. They commandeered the policemen's car and forced them to accompany them to an isolated spot in Oklahoma.

Less than a month later Gooch and Nix with a woman companion walked into an ambush of Federal agents and police at Okemah, Okla. They exchanged shots with the Federal men. Nix fell mortally wounded.

John Hays Hammond, Sr., Dies; Famed Engineer, Adventurer

Mining Expert, World Traveler, Succumbs at Age of 81.

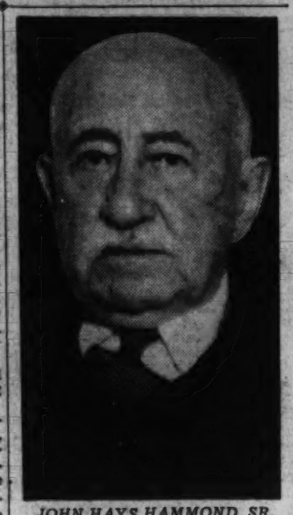
By the Associated Press.

Gloucester, Mass., June 8.—John Hays Hammond, sr., 81, noted mining engineer, died tonight at his home on Freshwater Cove, here, after a long illness. Death came unexpectedly, however.

Mr. Hammond, who had come to his estate, Lookout Hill, only last Saturday, had been about as usual today, apparently feeling well. Late today his secretary, William C. Griffin, found his body in a chair in his study.

Griffin immediately dispatched telegrams to relatives announcing the death.

Hammond, who once was sentenced to hang in the Transvaal, and who later was the special ambassador of President William Howard Taft at the coronation of the late King George V of England, spent part of last winter in Miami, and had been in West Virginia for a month. He came here from New York City.



JOHN HAYS HAMMOND, SR.

World Adventurer.

The mining engineer sought adventure throughout the world. He was a friend of such notables as Cecil Rhodes, Theodore Roosevelt, Mark Twain, Rudyard Kipling and Rider Haggard.

He had a palatial home in Washington as well as Gloucester and had offices in London and New York.

A doctor, who was summoned immediately, said Hammond died of heart disease.

John Hays Hammond, jr., the celebrated inventor, was at his estate near that of his father when news of the latter's death came. Richard Pindell Hammond, the youngest son, who is a composer, recently arrived to occupy a new home on the North Shore.

Griffin began attempts to reach Miss Natalie Hammond, a daughter, who was believed visiting friends near New York. He also communicated with the third son, Harris Hammond, of New York City.

A sister, Miss Elizabeth Hammond, who always traveled with the elder Hammond, was at the estate here.

Life Story "Thriller."

If the life story of John Hays Hammond, gold prospector, mining expert, multimillionaire and adventurer, would be written into a motion picture scenario or a popular

Roosevelt Off On Week Tour Of Southwest

Boards Special Train for Arkansas, Texas and Other States.

By the United Press.

President Roosevelt left last midnight on a speaking tour that will take him half-way to the Pacific and keep him absent from the Capital for a week.

After conferences with Congressional leaders and members of his Cabinet, the President boarded a special train which headed for Arkansas, where tomorrow he will participate in that State's centennial celebration.

The first stop will be at Hot Springs, where he plans to inspect hospital facilities. From there he will motor to Little Rock, with halts scheduled along the way. At Little Rock he will deliver the first of three major addresses.

Goes Later to Texas.

At the conclusion of the Arkansas festivities, Mr. Roosevelt will entrain for Texas to become the chief participant in that State's 100th anniversary celebration. He will go first to San Antonio and thence to Houston, Austin, Dallas and Fort Worth.

As he cleared from his desk vestiges of business, it was reiterated by attaches that his trip into the Southwest was in no wise political; that his speeches would be devoted to historic subjects pertinent to the States visited, and that every effort would be made to avoid conflict on the radio with proceedings of the Republican National Convention.

Some observers, nevertheless, saw in the 4,000-mile swing of Mr. Roosevelt the beginning of the open season on campaign touring in spite

Babcock Recall Backed in First Vote by Lodge

A. F. G. E. Head Stricken by Heart Attack as Council Seeks to Oust Him.

A resolution recommending immediate recall proceedings against E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, was unanimously adopted last night by Internal Revenue Lodge, No. 7, largest group in the A. F. G. E.

Earlier in the day Babcock suffered a heart attack shortly after replying with an emphatic "No!" to demands that he resign. He had been assailed by A. F. G. E. executive council members and retired to his home at 3301 Military road northwest, as sessions continued at the Hamilton Hotel.

The unit, which has 1,401 members on its roles, is the first of the A. F. G. E. lodges to inaugurate proceedings against Babcock, who has been assailed by Federation executives and officials for his recent pamphlet criticizing the "spoils system" of the Roosevelt Administration.

Introduced by Tanner.

As Babcock was confined at his home the Internal Revenue group also gathered at the Hamilton and took the definite step which may pave the way for ousting him.

The resolution was introduced by Larue Tanner, past president of the lodge, and it was adopted without a dissenting vote.

Clauses in the resolution provide for:

Initiation of proceedings for the purpose of recalling Babcock; and submission to lodges throughout the country of a recall vote.

Babcock was censured for his pamphlet in the resolution. The charge was brought that the pamphlet "Influence or Merit," was

Eugene Field's Widow Is Dead In Home Saved by Fraternity

By the Associated Press.

Heafford Junction, Wis., June 8. Two weeks after her Crystal Lake estate had been saved from a mortgage sale by her poet-husband's fraternity, Mrs. Julia Field, 80, widow of Eugene Field, died late today of heart disease.

Eugene Field 2d, who was with her when she died, said death came suddenly to his mother who had been improving steadily since sale of the 155-acre estate was averted on May 23.

When Phi Delta Theta Fraternity came to her aid with a loan of $3,000 to forestall confirmation of the foreclosure sale, Eugene and his younger brother, Roswell, New York advertising man, disagreed as to the advisability of retaining the property.

Roswell declared that payment of the mortgage would be "passing a death sentence" upon his ailing mother. He urged that she move to Tomahawk, where her doctor lives and where her daughter, Mrs. E. D. Foster, resides with her family.

Eugene said it would be a death sentence if the property were not saved. After the fraternity had completed arrangements for the loan, Mrs. Field said she felt as if she had been made "the mother of the fraternity."

"I consider they saved my life," she said.

Mrs. Field, the former Julia Sutherland Comstock, of St. Joseph, Mo., was married to the poet in 1873. Field, whose fame rose while he conducted the "Sharps and Flats" column in the Chicago Daily News, died in 1895 in Chicago.

The greater part of Field's estate, which relatives estimated at $200,000, was lost in Chicago real estate during the depression. The widow, however, clung to the property she purchased here in 1921. Her income, in recent years, had been limited to royalties from her husband's works and the younger Eugene said they had dwindled to practically nothing.

When loss of the lake estate seemed imminent, the family applied to the Home Owners Loan Corporation, but the appeal was rejected. The younger Field sought help from a collector of Fieldiana in St. Louis early in May, and a few days later the Phi Delta Theta Society, of which Field was a member at the University of Missouri and Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., decided to act.

Eugene said burial services would be conducted probably Thursday at the Shrine of the Church of the Holy Comforter, Kennilworth, Ill., where his father is buried.

The elder Field won fame in the era of Chicago journalism that produced Finley Peter Dunne, Opie Read and George Ade. Possessing a keen sense of humor, he penned brilliant, spicy prose and simple rhymes about children, of which the best known perhaps are "Little Boy Blue" and "Wynken, Blynken and Nod." Mrs. Field considered the latter his best literary work.

"Little Boy Blue," she said, probably was inspired by their first child, a boy, who died in babyhood. It brought him no money, as he gave it to the editor of a magazine which failed.

Tax Delayed As Conferees See Roosevelt

President Insists Upon Corporate Levy Based on Undivided Profits.

House Group Is Named; May Meet With Senate Chiefs Tomorrow.

By William V. Nessly.

Out of a hastily called White House conference between President Roosevelt and majority members of the Senate and House conference committees on the much-controverted tax bill, there emerged late yesterday these general understandings:

That those in the conference "talked very freely" on their conflicting views of the revenue legislation, and the President emphasized again his belief that corporation taxes in the measure should be based on the amount of undistributed profits.

That the expected struggle between the House and Senate conferees on the main points of difference will not be reached this week, while some of the Republican conferees are at the Cleveland convention.

That the House conferees, appointed only yesterday, will spend today studying the bill passed last Friday and will hold their first meeting with the Senate committee probably tomorrow.

Conferees Appointed.

House conferees appointed yesterday by Speaker Bankhead were:

Chairman Doughton, Democrat of North Carolina, of the Ways and Means Committee, and Representatives Sam B. Hill, Democrat of Washington; Cullen, Democrat, New York; Vinson, Democrat, Kentucky; Cooper, Democrat, Tennessee; Treadway, Republican, Massachusetts; Crowther, Republican, New York, and Woodruff, Republican, Michigan.

Senator King said "we talked very freely with the President" at the White House, "and merely exchanged views on the tax legislation. We went over, generally, the divergencies in the House and Senate bills and are hopeful we can get together on a satisfactory measure at the earliest possible date."

Won't Make Prediction.

No one following the conference would make any prediction as to when conference reports could be submitted to the houses. Resumption of sessions in both chambers is set for next Monday, when it was originally hoped that the conferees could report. However, decision to delay negotiations over the chief disputed points until after the Cleveland convention may delay indefinitely final action on the measure to be agreed upon in conference.

The House bill more nearly represents the President's views on corporation taxes. It provided for a graduated corporate net income tax scaling up to 42½ per cent, based on the amount of undistributed profits. The Senate provided for only a flat 7 per cent levy on undistributed profits. The Black-La Follette tax plan, calling for a tax ranging up to 30 per cent on the undistributed income, has been suggested as a possible compromise.

Senators George, of Georgia; Walsh, of Massachusetts; Connally, of Texas, and Barkley, of Kentucky, in addition to Senator King, attended the White House meeting, along with Representatives Doughton, Hill, Vinson and Cooper.

Measure Formally Rejected.

The House conferees were selected afted that chamber yesterday formally rejected the measure as passed by the House, and after Representative Lamneck, Democrat, of Ohio, attacked the measure as "revolutionary" and a threat to business and at first objected to sending the measure to conference.

"This bill," he said, "has been entirely rewritten since it left the House. I am not in favor of the Senate bill but I prefer it ten times over the House bill."

Last night Chairman Doughton said the House conferees "naturally will make a fight for the original

Candidate Found! 'Midas' Seeks Job As Fairfax Mayor

Some one does want to be mayor of Fairfax, Va., after all.

Alex Matthews, 34, wants to be a candidate. He read yesterday that no one had filed for the position and that the election will be held today.

He runs a combination cleaning-pressing-shoe shining establishment at 5514 Connecticut avenue northwest.

Yesterday he inquired about how he could file for office.

"You know I always wanted to be a mayor," he explained.

But the job doesn't pay any money, he was told.

Matthews snapped his fingers as though he didn't care and said:

"I got plenty of money. I'm a Midas—that's what I am. Everything I touch turns to gold."

He intended last night to go down to Fairfax to see if he could arrange to run.

"I'd show that town something," he said. "I'd give it nation-wide prominence. I'd wrap 'em around my finger. Think I can't run a town?

"Why, Napoleon and all them fellows—they weren't so hot. Why, just give me a crack at that town, Heck," he yelled, waving his arm in a wide sweep around the room of his ceaning, pressing and laundry establishment, "if I can run a goofy joint like this I could do anything."

Coalition Crumbles as Borah Concedes Victory to Landon, Fights Platform Compromise

Asks Landon's Currency Views in Opposing Return to Gold.

Seeks Firm Plank Backing Neutrality

Senator Renews Attack on Trusts, Demands Convention Action.

By Robert C. Albright.

A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 8.—Slashing out at what he called "the spirit of compromise" in platform drafting, Senator William E. Borah, the candidate, brought three rugged planks on monopoly, foreign relations and currency to Cleveland today, and virtually demanded the right to defend them on the Republican convention floor.

Borah raged at tentative planks of "the controlling forces in the convention," tossing a liberal and discordant note into a platform controversy that already was sputtering merrily away before the resolutions committee, charged with its drafting, had held a single meeting.

Borah received his answer from Landon on the monopoly issue almost immediately. The Kansan struck at the "tyranny of monopoly" and the "bondage of bureaucracy" in a speech tonight before the graduating class of the University of Kansas.

If there was a move under way to placate the Idaho independent he made the task hard. He called preliminary drafts of the foreign affairs plank "timid, cowardly and straddling." Suggested monopoly planks, he said, "will carry conviction to no voter." He even quoted from press dispatches declaring that Landon managers have turned "drafting of the platform planks an money over to those who are openly and uncompromisingly for the single gold standard," and then called on Gov. Alf Landon himself to state his views on the money question.

As to his own currency, foreign affairs and monopoly planks, he said he was not ready to make them public, but the resolutions committee could have them for the asking—on one condition.

Wants to Take Floor.

"I am perfectly willing to submit them if I am given an opportunity to defend them, if they are rejected, on the convention floor."

Borah is not a delegate to the convention. He is a candidate, and as a United States Senator is invited to sit on the platform. But it would require the unanimous consent of the convention for him to speak.

Informed of the interview, John Hamilton, Landon manager, remarked that Borah "doesn't have to appear before the resolution committee if he doesn't want to."

As for his addressing the convention in defense of his own planks, Hamilton said merely that if his was the deciding voice, he would not block unanimous permission for Borah to speak.

Hamilton Denies Claim.

Hamilton quietly but firmly denied that "uncompromising" defenders of the gold standard are drafting the Republican money plank.

"That is not true," he said.

As for Landon's own currency views, the young chieftain of the Kansas forces said the Governor is for sound money, has said so repeatedly in his speeches, and will stand on any sound money plank the convention adopts.

Then Hamilton went the whole route to meet Borah on his monopoly views.

"Mr. Borah can't draft a plank on monopoly so strong that I will not personally help him get it in the platform if he will tell me what it is."

Borah did not tell the reporters what his monopoly plank was, but he threw out some strong hints.

When newsmen asked him what he meant by "monopoly," he said he meant the power of an industry

G.O.P., Made Lean by Adversity, Now Caters to the Rank and File

Added Attempts to Find Favor With 'Masses' Noted at Cleveland.

By Felix Morley.

Editor of The Post.

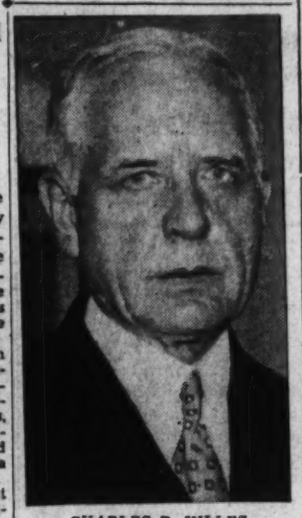
Cleveland, Ohio, June 8.—The drama of American democracy reaches its periodic climax in Cleveland tomorrow morning, when the Republican Party, in national convention assembled, proceeds to the solemn business of nominating its candidate for the Presidency of the United States.

From the nature of the situation democratic procedure is most pronounced at the nominating convention of the minority party. Inevitably the Cleveland gathering is, and will continue to be, more typically American than that scheduled to take place in Philadelphia a fortnight hence.

For at Philadelphia President Roosevelt is certain to be renominated; as certain as is Hitler of receiving a Reichstag indorsement on any issue submitted to it. But here at Cleveland the victorious candidate must win his way through a barrage of unrestrained criticism certain to bring down any man who cannot properly be labelled as the people's choice.

The Elephant Is Leaner.

Those who put the principles of democracy above party welfare can be glad that for more than three years now the Republican Party has been wandering in the wilderness. As illustrated by the survey of the delegates crowding Cleveland's hotel lobbies, the sour experience has stripped a lot of fat from the elephant. But it also has brought that symbolic animal in touch with fundamentals, the most important of which is the vital importance of democratic procedure in choosing the nominee.



CHARLES D. HILLES, a forlorn figure.

Old-timers say that there is less backstage maneuvering, fewer secret cabals at this convention than at any other in G. O. P. history. In part, that is doubtless due to the strength of the pre-convention Landon landslide. In part it is certainly a result of the democratic revival within a party which at times has held the common man in none too high esteem. Moreover, these two phenomena are obviously closely connected. Without the democratic revival Landon could not be so far ahead. And the fact that the Kansas Governor is so far

Foes Shift Assault on Kansan to Complain of His 'Obscurity.'

By Felix Bruner.

A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, June 8.—With the stage set for the opening of the Republican National Convention tomorrow, the "Stop Landon" movement crumbled rapidly tonight. An attempt to form a coalition of opposition candidates to prevent the nomination of the Kansas Governor was broken when Senator William E. Borah announced he would have no part in such a program.

By next Thursday night, if the convention program is followed, Alf M. Landon will almost certainly have been chosen, with very little opposition, as the Republican standard bearer. The only uncertainties remaining are details of the platform and the identity of the Vice Presidential nominee.

In a dramatic announcement, the Idaho Senator and candidate for President insisted he would have no part in any coalition against any candidate and immediately switched the emphasis from candidates to the platform. Although he insisted he still was seeking the nomination, he virtually conceded the selection of Landon.

Eliminates Himself.

Borah, criticizing platform drafts of other Republicans, denouncing any "spirit of compromise" and striking out at Landon, virtually eliminated himself from any position of power in the convention. His statement was expected to have little effect—except on Borah.

Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National Committee, will call the convention to order at 11 a. m. tomorrow. The Rev. Albert Joseph McCartney, pastor of the Covenant First Presbyterian Church, of Washington, will deliver the invocation. The delegates will be welcomed by Mayor Harold M. Burton. Committees on credentials and rules of order will be named.

Tomorrow night the delegates and visitors will hear the keynote speech of Senator Steiwer, of Oregon. Organization will be completed Wednesday, and that night former President Herbert Hoover will address the convention. If the program is followed, the platform will be adopted following the Hoover speech.

Balloting Likely Thursday.

On Thursday nominating speeches for candidates for President will be heard and, if these do not consume too much time, balloting for a Presidential nominee will be started, with a strong possibility that there will be not more than one or two ballots. A Vice Presidential candidate will be named immediately afternoon.

The Borah pronouncement was the highlight of pre-convention activities today. His statement, which apparently ends attempts to form a coalition against Landon, follows:

"I premise my remarks by saying that all talk about a combination for this or that purpose is wholly aside from any plans of mine. I am in no combination against any candidate, or candidates, or for any candidate. I shall not be in any combination at any time during this convention on the question of candidates. That you can rely upon."

While Borah repeated several times that he himself was still a candidate, he referred to the framing of a platform as the first and most important step.

Vandenberg Silent.

Meanwhile, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, who 24 hours before was reported to be actively attempting to form a coalition against Landon, and who had predicted "action" with the arrival of Borah in Cleveland, was sitting quietly by. It was indicated he would go little if any further with the movement. At the time, he was adhering to his statement that he would not accept the Vice Presidential nomination.

Senator Dickinson, of Iowa, let it be known that he was not running against any candidate. Gov. Nice of Maryland that State's favorite son, was waiting for the moment when it would be most ad-

Ruling Awaited Today in Rover, Colladay Clash

Two D. C. Colored Leaders Will Arrive as Credentials Group Meets.

By Edward T. Folliard.

A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, June 8.—The battle between Washington's two delegations to the Republican National Convention reaches the show-down stage tomorrow.

Leo A. Rover, who sponsors one slate of three delegates and three alternates, is scheduled to arrive here sometime tomorrow.

Edward F. Colladay, who sponsors the other slate of delegates and alternates, already is here. His delegates and alternates, by a decision of the national committee on Friday, are to be on the temporary roll when the convention opens tomorrow.

But the decision as to what delegation actually will take part in the balloting for the nominees for President and Vice President will be made by the committee on credentials. This committee is to be appointed by the convention tomorrow afternoon.

The committee on credentials, which is to be appointed by the convention itself, will meet late tomorrow. On it will be a representative of every delegation in the convention.

Two influential colored leaders are expected to arrive with Rover tomorrow morning. They are former Judge James Cobb, of the Municipal Court, and Emmet J. Scott, secretary of Howard University.

The contest between the Rover and Colladay factions may result in a quarrel as to which faction better represents the colored population in Washington.

Landon Assails Trusts in Talk At Alma Mater

His Call for Assault on Monopolies Parallels Views of Borah.

By the Associated Press.

Lawrence Kans., June 8.—Gov. Alf M. Landon sketched in broad terms a social and economic credo for the graduation class of his alma mater tonight while his political forces battled at Cleveland for the Republican Presidential nomination.

Speaking at the University of Kansas, Landon envisioned a "road ahead," avoiding what he called "the tyranny of monopoly and economic dictatorship on the one hand and the bondage of bureaucracy on the other."

Twice in his talk did the Governor specifically strike at what he termed "the tyranny of monopoly."

"This road (ahead)," Landon emphasized, "as I have said before and as I shall continue to say because I firmly believe it, avoids the tyranny of monopoly and economic dictatorship on the one hand and the bondage of bureaucracy on the other."

Borah Former Student.

Another key figure in the Cleveland contest, Senator Borah, the Republican independent from Idaho, in his campaign has assailed what he described as the evils of monopoly. Borah was a student here from 1885 to 1887.

It was the fourth time that Landon had observed the custom of the Governor of the State to attend commencement exercises. As a member of the class of 1908 the Governor also was entitled to wear the traditional cap and gown. He was the dinner guest of Chancellor E. H. Lindley after motoring from nearby Topeka, where he had varied his daily routine only by a visit to his dentist.

In a prepared address of less than 1,000 words Landon asserted:

"'We, the people,' must overthrow the tyranny of monopoly and economic dictatorship, in all fields of honorable endeavor, if we are to escape the shackles of bureaucracy in governmental life. And only by overthrowing the one and resisting the other shall we be able to open

Arrival of Peggy Ann Landon Rivals a Hollywood Premiere

By Sidney Olson.

A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, June 8.—An insidious disease known only as "convention foot" today began to take heavy toll among delegates, alternates and newspapermen.

The fearsome malady, characterized by acute agony from the ankles down, numbness from the ankles to the knees, and accompanied by a feeling of torpor and an intense desire to sit down, swept the Republican ranks in practically an epidemic by nightfall.

Newspapermen were hardest hit. Some of them were reported to be walking on their knees. And here's why:

Cleveland tonight is literally reeling under the full impact of the Republican horde. Its gray stone walls are festooned with tri-colored buntings, its store fronts and hotel arcades are plastered with giant lettered banners, its lobbies and street corners are knotted with men and women trying to make confidential whispers heard above the bellows of the carefree, its streets are shaken by the tread of delegates from bar to bar and back to bar again.

Done with the Sunday doldrums, a sort of hush before the take-off, the city this morning opened the throttle all the way. No one expects to sleep until the nominating speeches for the vice presidential candidates are made on Friday. Even then sleep is expected to be in but fitful naps as some very loud-voiced gentlemen have been engaged to do blasting.

Peggy Ann Landon, a slim young girl, the Governor's daughter, was

Anti-Landon Coalition Crumbles as Senator Borah Concedes Victory to Kansan

Platform First Consideration, Says Idahoan

vantageous to him to swing the Maryland delegation behind Landon.

In some quarters hope was expressed that former President Hoover's speech before the convention Wednesday might have some effect in solidifying the anti-Landon forces, but this was generally discounted. Lacking leadership and cohesion, opponents of the Kansas Governor were confining most of their efforts to asserting at every opportunity that no one knows where Landon stands. Borah was included among those using these tactics.

Praises Borah's Statement.

John Hamilton, Landon campaign manager, replied that Landon had as definitely asserted his position as had any other candidate.

"I tnink Borah's statement is in line with the independence he has displayed," Hamilton said. "It is a splendid statement."

Asked if he believed the coalition had collapsed, he said he did not agree that it had because he had been unable to find any evidence of one.

Borah was asked directly at a large press conference attended by nearly all the correspondents covering the convention whether he believed the Landon nomination was "in the bag." He replied with a smile:

"I am still a candidate."

Again Borah left open the position he will take after the convention. He was asked whether, if the platform adopted should be satisfactory to him, he would support the nominee.

"The nominee will have to be the expression of the platform," he replied.

Asked later if he would campaign for Landon, assuming the platform is satisfactory, he said he would cross that bridge when he came to it.

Transfers Denied.

Borah denied emphatically that delegates friendly to him had been transferred to another candidate.

"I wouldn't have the presumption to transfer any votes to another candidate," he said. "I have never even discussed it."

Asked whether he believed the Landon nomination would result in a change in party control satisfactory to him, he replied that he did not think so, judging from selections of national committeemen made by some of the State delegations today.

Borah, in discussing monopolies, referred to five big oil companies, some of which, he said, "are active in this convention." This was a repetition of previously made charges that oil companies are interested in the campaign.

Hamilton remarked that Borah previously had charged oil companies with being active in a State primary, but pointed out that Landon was not entered in that primary.

Hamilton declined to amplify his previous claims of Landon votes, but he said some of the members of the New York delegation, which arrived today, had called upon him and that probably his previous estimate had been too modest.

Others in Running.

With the anti-Landon coalition movement in a state of collapse, interest in a candidate for Vice President was increasing. Vandenberg apparently has put himself out of the picture, but all of the other dozen or more possibilities still were in the running.

Added to this list was the name of George N. Peek, former head of the Roosevelt Agricultural Adjustment Administration. His name was being brought forward by some of the Eastern delegates, including Representative Treadway, of Massachusetts, and Representative Brewster, of Maine.

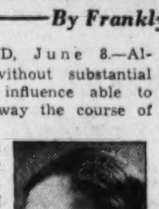
Borah Political Showman No. 1; Draws 500 Newspapermen to Press Conference.

By Franklyn Waltman

CLEVELAND, June 8.—Although without substantial following or influence able to turn in any way the course of events destined here this week—Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, remains without doubt America's greatest political showman.



WALTMAN.

If further evidence of that fact were needed, it came today when the Lion of Idaho single-handedly staged a press conference which had some 500 newspaper men or women from all the world figuratively hanging from the chandeliers of the huge empire room in the Cleveland Hotel.

Not only did Senator Borah stage the performance as perfectly as David Belasco ever presented a show, but he was the sole actor, striding into the room like a Hampden or Barrymore to a fitting pyrotechnic salute from the flashlights of three score photographers.

For 45 minutes he held in rapt attention this group, some standing on chairs, others on window sills and still others jammed tightly together, on aching feet and with perspiration streaming down their faces. The drama, the suspense, the significances, the rising and falling tones of the Senator's voice and his characteristic gesture of pushing back his leonine mane with his right hand held this crowd fascinated—even when at times he gave way to petulance or slipped into the tricks of a Barnum.

In essence the drama which Senator Borah played today was that of a 71-year-old man, who has fought on the political rostrum for 40 years, suddenly coming to the end of his political road—capitulating before his enemies, but doing so with such bravado and elan that his retreat had all the appearance of being an advance.

He indicated clearly that he fully realized there was no chance of stopping Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas in his triumphal march to the Republican Presidential nomination. He announced that he would not be the spearhead of any "stop Landon" movement—and, since the other anti-Landon leaders have refused to play that role, it means the nomination of the Kansan is as sure as anything can be in politics.

It was a complete surrender on the part of Senator Borah. At the moment when many thought he would rise to new heights in his fight for the Presidential nomination, he suddenly capitulated—as he has done many times before in other matters.

But within the twinkling of an eye the Lion of Idaho was off on another crusade. He said in his radio address ten days ago that the identity of the Republican Presidential nominee was paramount to that of the party platform. But today he decided that the candidate was secondary to the platform.

Swiftly and sharply he attacked tentative planks on money, foreign affairs and monopoly which have been drafted here by the Landon forces, he said, for submission to the convention. He assailed proposals that the party espouse a constitutional amendment to clothe the States with authority to prescribe minimum wages for workers—contending the States already had such power despite the Supreme Court decision.

Finally, as a dramatic gesture, he demanded that the Kansan make clear his position on the money question and asserted that he would not present his proposed planks on these questions unless he was assured in advance that he would be given an opportunity to defend them before the convention in the event they were rejected by the resolutions committee.

And, above all, he again left veiled in mystery what attitude he would take after the convention adjourns if his wishes were not granted. Thus adding the suspense which always makes the Idahoan front-page news.

No man who has gone down to defeat in a major political effort as badly as Senator Borah has in the Republican pre-convention maneuvering has ever covered his retreat so adroitly. Even though he is not an important figure in the convention hall, he remains a major figure in the news.

For weeks those familiar with the developments in Republican ranks were fully aware that Senator Borah was fighting a futile fight. Those who knew the Idahoan predicted he would not go through to the bitter end against Gov. Landon, but would capitulate at the last minute. And those who know also predict that he will not bolt the Republican Party when the convention is over.

The Landon camp will go through the motions of making concessions to Senator Borah's platform demands. John Hamilton, Landon campaign manager, quickly took the Idahoan up on his proposal to write the plank on monopoly. But the Landon backers decided to do that weeks ago.

The Landon managers likewise never have had any intention of sponsoring a money plank favoring a return to the old gold standard. They know the sentiment which exists in the farm States as well as Senator Borah does. The idea that Wall Street standpatters would write the money plank is ridiculous. That plank will be opposed to a managed currency and monetary experimentation. But it will not sing any Hosannas over gold. Nor will the platform unqualifiedly declare in favor of a constitutional amendment in regard to the minimum wage legislation. It will declare that the States should adopt such legislation and if it is found they lack the authority, then the party pledges itself to remedy the defect by proposing an amendment to the Constitution.

And Senator Borah will find that the platform is not so bad—and he will run for re-election in Idaho. Senator Borah's father greatly desired that his son become an actor. The more one sees of Senator Borah the clearer it becomes his father was right.

Ashurst Seeks Wider Powers For Congress

Amendment to Give Legislators Rule Over Industry Proposed.

By the Associated Press.

A proposal to amend the Constitution to empower Congress "to regulate agriculture, commerce, industry and labor" was introduced yesterday in the Senate by Chairman Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, of the Judiciary Committee.

Ashurst, asked whether the suggestion, made on the eve of the national political conventions, had Administration backing, said:

"Nobody knew of it and nobody approved it."

He said plans for Judiciary Committee consideration of the measure had not been made. He added that he would work to get it through as soon as possible.

Text of Resolution.

The resolution said:

"Section 1—The Congress shall have power to make laws to regulate agriculture, commerce, industry and labor.

"Section 2—This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, as provided in the Constitution, within seven years from the date of the submission thereof, to the States by Congress."

Ashurst said the measure would "grant to Congress the power, within some limitations, to make such laws as were recently declared by the Supreme Court of the United States to be beyond the power of Congress to enact."

Would Add to Powers.

This proposed amendment, if ratified," he said, "would give Congress power to regulate hours and conditions of labor, fix minimum wage standards in any employment, regulate industry, business, production, agriculture, commerce, labor and trade, and denounce unfair practices.

"If additional power be needed by Congress, in order to enact social legislation, we must secure authority from the source of Governmental power—the people themselves, by constitutional amendment, and not by insisting that the Supreme Court shall make strained constructions and interpretations of the Constitution."

Ashurst said he did not intend to bring the matter to the attention of the Democratic convention.

"My business is the Senate," he added. "I've never been to a national convention in my life."

O'Connor Predicts Vote on Coal Bill

By the Associated Press.

Indications that both the Guffey coal law substitute and the Walsh-Healey Government contract bills would be acted on by the House despite a drive for adjournment by June 20 was given last night by Chairman O'Connor, (Democrat, New York) of the Rules Committee.

Summarizing the status of legislation sitll before Congress, O'Connor said in a prepared radio address that "we shall strive with all our efforts to adjorn during the week of June 15."

The Rules chairman explained that had it not been for the death last week of Speaker Byrns, the coal bill to take the place of the recently invalidated Guffey act, already would have been passed by the House and sent to the Senate.

He said it was "likely" the Walsh-Healey bill would be taken up in the House early next week. The measure, requiring persons selling to the Government to observe the eight-hour day and other labor requirements, passed the Senate last session in widely different form.

Women's Status at Cleveland Stresses 'Fight or Beg' Issue

Lobbies at Convention, Voicing Demands But Shunning Active Role Within Party, Betray Attitude Barring Political Advance.

By Agnes E. Meyer.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 8.—One issue has been classified definitely by the Republican Convention at Cleveland. The women of America will have to make up their minds without further loss of time whether they are going to fight for their rights or whether they are going to continue sitting on convention door-steps with a tin cup in their hands.

For that is precisely what the woman's lobby is doing.

While the floor of the Republican Convention is occupied by fewer women delegates than that of any previous convention, the Cleveland hotel lobbies are cluttered up with little stands and with literature of all sorts voicing the demands of the Womans Party, the League of Women Voters, the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom and the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

At a luncheon of the League of Women Voters more than 400 women applauded Margaret Culkin Banning when she proclaimed:

"The league brings a great deal to political parties in information, clear heads and uncorruptible consciences."

How long are the women of the country going to content themselves with this feeling of superiority toward politics? Mrs. Banning unconsciously betrayed the reason why the league members hold themselves aloof from the political fray.

Work in a political party, said Mrs. Banning, "involves misunderstanding, little praise, uncertain personal fortunes and few gratitudes."

If those words mean anything, they are an appeal to women to play safe with the league, where praise and personal fortune and gratitude are assured, even though political power is being almost wholly preempted by men.

While I was on my way to the league luncheon through the lobby of the Statler, Betty Gram Swing (not "Mrs.," she implored) dashed out with a copy of the equal rights amendment which the National Woman's Party is again pressing upon the Republican Convention.

"If you really want to be equal, why don't you take your own medicine," I queried, "and try to get equal representation in the conventions?"

"Not at all," she said.

Betty insists lobbying is the only method, whereas any impartial observer knows that such lobbying is the ancient female technique of sex-appeal, when it is not outright begging.

These two organizations are at swords points, but they both represent a serious obstacle to the progress of feminism in America. Both are hang-overs from suffrage days. The suffrage movement had developed several distinguished and able women leaders, to whom the idea of starting a new and lowly career within the political parties was naturally distasteful.

To continue their influence one group founded the L. of W. V., another the Woman's Party, thereby creating a refuge for all women who cannot make up their minds to contend with the more strenuous demands of the political arena.

The League of Women Voters in particular has in this way absorbed some of the ablest women in the country, and more particularly the Democratic women. For wherever the Democratic Party organization is too raw for delicate stomachs, the better class of Democratic women have found an escape through their activities in the league.

But this selection of the easiest way has been disastrous, especially for the Democratic women. For several years the league has studied methods for strengthening laws and regulations affecting conditions of employment in the Federal civil service. This year the Republican platform will contain a strong civil service plank, but members of the League of Women Voters must not deceive themselves into thinking that they had anything to do with it. This plank is the result of a sharp revulsion against the destruction of our civil service system by this Democratic Administration. But if the Democratic women who are playing around in the League of Women Voters had been fighting within their party ranks against the patronage system it would not have been so easy for President Roosevelt and Jim Farley to disregard their wishes in the first place. In other words, by disregarding their duty toward their own party, the Democratic women have contributed toward a deplorable situation which they are now, as league members and outsiders, trying to remedy.

Solid Opposition.

The Woman's Party members find themselves in an equally difficult position, for they find in this convention period not only a unanimous Republican Party, but an almost unanimous popular opinion arrayed against them when they hailed as a great victory the recent Supreme Court decision which declared the New York minimum wage law unconstitutional.

Although the Republican platform has not yet been written, it is already certain that it will contain a plank taking sharp issue with the court in this decision and calling for a constitutional amendment unless other loopholes can be found whereby the States are still in possession of the right to protect the working conditions of women and children. The Democratic convention will scarcely differ with this point of view unless it tries to go the Republicans one better by making the question a subject for Federal legislation. In any case, the Woman's Party finds both party doors slammed in its face, and if it wishes to continue its struggle this experience should teach it that it can fight successfully only within and not without the party organizations.

United on One Issue.

One issue, and one alone, finds all of the women's lobbies in accord—opposition to section 213 of the economy act, which discriminates against married women in the Government service. For legislation of such an unjust character women have themselves to blame, for it would not have been possible to pass such a bill if women had begun to consolidate their political power the moment they were given the vote.

Politicians will continue to discriminate against women as long as the women prefer a hopeless crusade to an ounce of prevention. The politicians know perfectly well that the League of Women Voters or any of the other large feminine organizations cannot deliver its own vote and the groups therefore receive no consideration from the powers-that-be and never will.

Mrs. Edith V. Cook has made an analysis of the enonomic position of women for the league in which she reports that women as a whole are facing a serious crisis threatening their whole social and industrial status. What these women's organizations must ask themselves at once is whether they are not slipping economically because they are slipping politically. That women are slipping politically their pitiful representation in the Republican Conventon clearly demonstrates.

Illinois Delegation Selects Harding

Cleveland, Ohio, June 8 (AP).—George F. Harding, of Chicago, was elected national committeeman from Illinois by the delegates to the Republican natoinal convention tonight. He defeated the incumbent, Frank L. Smith, of Dwight, 33 to 22.

Harding, political mentor of C. Wayland Brooks, Republican nominee for Governor of Illinois, was elected on the first ballot. Neither he nor Smith voted.

The caucus chose Omer Custer, Galesburg, Ill., publisher and former State treasurer, as chairman. He was also selected to be chairman o fthe delegation throughout the convention. His elections were by acclamation.

Senate Confirms Payne.

The Senate yesterday confirmed the reappointment of George Payne, of New York, to the Communications Commission for a seven-year term commencing July 1.

There are two ways to build a motor car. It can be built to sell at a certain price—and the quality brought within that predetermined range. Or, it can be built as finely as possible, letting the price fall where it may. La Salle is built to this latter formula. It is built as finely as Cadillac knows how—and priced as low as the quality will permit. That is what makes La Salle so unique—for no car built to a price formula could possibly compete with La Salle.

Borah Denounces Talk of Compromise in Platform, Will Seek Floor on His Proposals to fix prices, and charged "price fixing" by "five great oil companies" which, he said, "are very active in this convention."

"I would make it a criminal offense to fix prices, and prohibit any monopolistic corporation from using the channels of interstate commerce," he said. "I have a bill in Congress now that will do just that."

Having had his say on the platform, which he called the "most important step" before the convention, the Idahoan retreated to his hotel rooms, from which reporters had been trying vainly all day to budge him. Shortly after his arrival in Cleveland, his managers had announced a conference with the press at 9 a. m. This was postponed to 10:30, to 1 p. m., and finally to 4 p. m., when he finally received reporters.

Borah's slap at the early attempts at platform drafting and his refusal to take his own proposals before the resolutions committee unless he was accorded the right to the convention floor, rendered an already delicate platform situation more delicate.

Hamilton suggested one way out, but it was doubtful that Borah would take it. He recalled that William Allen White, Kansas publisher and Sunflower State's representative on the resolutions committee, had called on the Idahoan in Washington sometime ago, at which time Borah is reputed to have said he was not interested in what the platform contained.

"So, if he has something to present, he knows where to go," Hamilton said. "Mr. White happens to be a very old friend of his, coming from the same wing of the same party."

"That is the perfect channel of approach if he chooses to take it. If you don't agree with a man, you at least should tell him where you disagree."

Overtures Discussed.

Overtures to the Idahoan, calculated to keep him close in the party ranks whoever the candidate, have been under discussion for days, and it is known that this consideration already has influenced early attempts at platform drafting.

One suggestion, quickly indorsed by Hamilton today, was to make former Senator John Thomas, of Idaho, well-known banker and close friend of Borah, chairman of the resolutions committee.

"That would be a splendid selection and a good idea," said Hamilton.

But earlier in the evening Borah had informed reporters that he would not be influenced by such a selection.

"Idaho would regard that as a great compliment, but it would not have any binding effect upon me as to platform," said Borah.

Asked if he would support the convention's nominee, if the platform was drafted to his liking, Borah replied:

"The nominee will have to be the expression of the platform—if I get what I want."

The "Lion of Idaho" said he was addressing his platform comment publicly, "hoping it will have its effect."

Gives Out Statement.

He released a mimeographed statement to reporters which read:

"I have seen drafts which purpor tto represent the views of what appear to be the controlling forces in the convention. The draft on foreign affairs is timid, straddling, cowardly. The conditions in Europe are such that we may hvae to meet this problem at any time. We should not equivocate. Le tus speak in the old language of American patriots. The Republican Party will be untrue to itself and false to the American people if the platform has one single timid note in it on this subject. We should stand for absolute neutrality in all foreign controversies.

"The drafts on monopoly which I have seen are in language practically such as we have been familiar with for 40 years. This language will carry conviction to no voter. And it will take some time to convince the people of this country that we are in earnest about this question of monopoly at best. These drafts represent what we hear so much about her ein Cleveland, and that is, that we must be guided by a spirit of compromise. Compromise on this subject is pure political cowardice.

"There are strong and resourceful men here seeking to commit the party to the old, rigid gold standard. The gold standard is another form of monopoly, money monopoly. It means not the money of the people but the money of bankers and speculators. It means lower prices for the producers.

Cites Press Dispatches.

"According to the press dispatches, the Landon managers have turned the drafting of the platform planks on money over to those who are openly and uncompromisingly for the rigid gold standard. I do not know whether these managers represent the Governor or not, but I think we are entitled to know. Gov. Landon is the leading candidate. When interviewed a short time ago upon this subject, he did not express any views whatever. This is a vital question and affects the welfare of the producers of this country in a most vital way. The action of the managers of Gov. Landon makes it highly important that we know his views upon this subject. The platform means very little one way or the other unless we know exactly the views of the candidates."

Under questioning, Borah reiterated his opposition to plank proposals for a constitutional amendment giving specifically to the States the power to regulate wages and hours.

"My feeling is that the States already have the right under the police powers to legislate on any subject relating to the health and general welfare of the people within their borders," he said, reiterating his belief that "we should not rush in every time there is a 5-to-4 decision by the Supreme Court."

"In analyzing the opinions of the court I have reached the conclusion that a law can be drawn," he continued. "I haven't any doubt at all but the States now have the power to deal with this question."

Fears Opening of Door.

The Idahoan said he feared "to open the door to readjust the relationships of the two sovereigns—Federal and State."

"Once you do that, you can't stop," he went on. "You have to readjust the whole question of sovereignty and that is too important a question to be decided by any political convention—even a Republican convention. The right to amendment lies with the people and I hope they will never take their first spontaneity from a political convention."

Borah touched only briefly on the farm problem. He said he did not believe "subsidies" ever would solve the farm question, even though they provided some temporary aid.

A few hours earlier, before an Idaho delegation caucus, Borah had urged that the Republican Party "b edynamited from its lethargy," and asserted his primary interest in platform.

"If the convention adopts a timid expression on such vital questions as face us today, th ecaus eis lost," he told Idaho delegates. "The Republican Party must sound a clarion call to the people through a dynamic platform. We want a platform that means the Republican Party will take up the figh tof the people. The time has come for a clarion call to the partw to write a plain and specific platform that is understandable to the average man and woman. * * * The Republican Party is engaged in a fight for its life. We need a progressive, courageous, intelligent man, and a progressive, courageous and intelligent platform, or w ecannot hope for victory."

Leadership Fight Delayed in House

By the Associated Press.

The House Democratic leadership fight subsided yesterday apparently until next session after several candidates for the post had gone into a huddle.

c Representative Rankin of Mississippi announced his willingness to hold up circulation of a petition he had planned for this week to force a caucus on the important question of filling a vacancy arising out of the elevation of Representative Bankhead of Alabama to the Speakership.

But indications were that there would be a lively fight when the new Congress convenes next January. Representative Rayburn of Texas announced his candidacy durfng th eday and Representative Woodrum of Virginia told questioners he had been approached by friends and urged to make the race.

Others mentioned have included Representative Mead, of New York; Boland, of Pennsylvania, the present whip; McCormack, of Massachusetts, and Crosser, of Ohio.

Rankin conditioned holding up the caucus petition on the contingency that no other candiate be given the advantage of being allowed to act as leader for the remainder of this session and specifically that no "attempt is made to foist Mr. O'Connor of New York onto the House as the Democratic floor leader."

Polly Landon's Arrival Is Like Film Premiere

Cleveland Takes Youthful Daughter of Kansan to Its Heart.

In the main floor of the 52-story Terminal Tower Building that dominates the Cleveland skyline is the lobby of the railroad station.

The trains come in below this vast lobby, and the arriving visitors ascend to the lobby on a series of staircases set in pits at intervals. Around one of these pits more than 1,000 pushing spectators gathered, vigorously elbowing photographers and reporters out of the way. By 5 p. m, no one could move in the lobby.

At 5:50 p. m. the train came in. Maj. Gen. Charles G. Dawes, the Hell 'n' Maria vice president, came up the stairs. One reporter said: "Hello, General." One photographer used a plate. The mob ignored the man who has zeen a power in the Republican Party for many years. They were waiting for Peggy Landon.

Up the stairs at last she came, a college girl in a grey traveling suit, a tight grey hat snapped over her forehead, a brown string tie around the collar of her orange blouse.

Bedlam broke loose.

Form Wedge.

Cheering, shouting, they surged at her like a mob at a Hollywood premiere, snatching at her clothes, crying, "Hello, Peggy," begging autographs. A wedge of Landon men formed around her. Photographers apparently went insane, shooting as fast as they could load up, tossing burnt flash bulbs to the floor. She was escorted to a microphone, dazed by the noise and frightened at the spectacle. An announced asked her to say something. She said loudly:

"I won't say anything."

A girl friend said, "Tell them you're thrilled to death," but Peggy Anne said, "No!" even more firmly. Her bodyguard shoved her out among them to the front sidewalk where another thousand had gathered, stood her before the newsreel cameramen for a few moments, and then stuffed her into a cab for the Hollenden Hotel, Landon headquarters.

Now out of the station came a plumpish, white-haired old man, firm of step, pleasantly bewildered at the scene, anxious to co-operate. This was John M. Landon, father of the Kansas Governor. He kept saying, "I'm prould of my boy, and I think we'll win."

At the Hollenden the same scene was repeated in the large ballroom that the the Landon headquarters, where scores of sunburned Kansans sit about all day swapping eulogies of their chief and endeavoring to attract the attention of Campaign Manager John Hamilton, just in case some day there might be a postmastership open somewhere.

Here an entirely new set of even more aggressive photographers took charge until the slim little girl was quivering with nervous shock. After a half-hour of bellowed commands and the constant flare of the bulbs in her face she was spirited upstairs to a press conference in which only reporters were allowed.

"Floored" by Welcome.

Your correspondent was the only male reporter present at this session, hence was considerably unnerved, but he stuck it out to learn that Peggy Anne practically lives in riding boots and bathing suits, that she is "rather floored" by her welcome, that she is a Pi Beta Phi, not a member of any young Republican club, has never made a speech and never wants to, had her last birthday on April 8, has no political aspirations herself, expects to maryr some day and be a housewife, has dark brown eyes, parts her hair in the middle and wears it long with puffs above the ears, speaks in a low contralto, has never been engaged, has never been in the White House, doesn't know whether her father will win this year, calls him "Daddy," has no favorite movie stars, liking Boris aKrloff and Fredric March equally well, and brought only two suitcases of luggage with her.

At about this point another feminine reporter came to join the throng. Peggy called out "Come on in. There's no one here but us girls," and your correspondent, blushing to the collarbone, tiptoed away.

But trailing Peggy Anne and her grandfather was but an incident in a day crammed with press conferences, each in a hotel just near enough to make a cab seem an extravagance. Thus correspondents accustomed to calling Washington the city of magnificent distances, have taken to claiming that Cleveland is th ecity of deceptive distances.

Borah's press conference was a hectic one. At 4 p. m., after three false alarms, it was set for a parlor room in the Hotel Cleveland. One hundred and fifty news hawps jammed the place and another 100 packed the corridor outsire, until one of the latter group shouted on a sudden inspiration, "it's been shifted to the Empire room," a much larger place, and the whole drove flocked there.

Senator Is Persuaded.

Thus Senator Borah came in to find an empty room for his press conference and had to be persuaded to go down the hall to the Empire room, where he sat on a little red-plush chair in the middle of the small dance-floord and strove to answer with dignity the scores of penetrating questions shouted at him.

Then came Hamilton's conference held in the rendezvous bar of the Hollenden Hotel, a red-leather and mooernistic silver-trimmed room, temporarily stripped of the "fixin's," where the square-jawed dark-red-haired young strategist sat on a table before the bar and adroitly parried questions for a half-hour.

OldDominion's Delegates Split Over Landon

Poll Finds Half Backing Kansan With Rest of Support Scattered.

Convention Bureau of The Washington Post.

Cleveland, June 8.—The State of Virginia, which supplied America with its first Presidents, is very much disorganized on the eve of the Republican National Convention.

So far as The Post representative can discern, the 17 delegates from the Old Dominion are divided half and half—50 per cent for Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, and the other half scattered among Knox, Vandenberg, Hoover and Steiwer.

The Virginia delegation held a caucus this morning. It adopted a platform as a model for the national convention and elected Col. Henry W. Anderson, of Richmond, to serve on the resolutions committee and present the platform.

There was talk tonight of a fight to oust Joseph L. Crupper, of Rosslyn, as national committeeman. Friends of Maj. Henry A. Wise, of Kilopeke, announced openly that they planned to put Wise over as committeeman.

The platform adopted at this morning's caucus of the Virginia delegation contained 18 planks. Among them were the following:

Integrity of the Supreme Court.

A sound currency with an adequate gold reserve.

Withdrawal of Government competition in private business fields.

Surplus disposals on foreign markets.

Agricultural aid through tariff, farm co-operatives and soil erosion prevention.

Co-operation with States in social security legislation.

Abandonment of "senseless experimenation in Government."

Collective bargaining rights for laborers.

Reduction of Government expenses and a balanced budget.

At the caucus H. B. McCormac, of Winchester, was named chairman of the delegation. Curtis Dozier, sr., of Richmond, was named secretary.

North Dakota's Caucus Shows Borah Is Choice

Cleveland, June 8 (AP).—North Dakota stood almost solidly for United States Senator William E. Borah for the Republican Presidential nomination tonight after the eight uninstructed delegates concluded their first caucus.

A poll of the delegates showed Borah had six votes and Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, one. The other vote probably will go to Borah, although this one delegate was represented as being friendly to Vandenberg, but agreeable to voting with the majority of the delegation.

ahead is rapidly demoting former leaders from the status of general staff to that of camp followers.

"Bill, you and I are almost the only members of the Old Guard to be found round here," said Charles D. Hilles to William Allen White last night. The famous Kansas Progressive recounts the incident with some glee, and a strong intimation that his reply to Hilles closely resembled that of Priscilla, when she told John Alden to "speak for yourself, John."

States' Rights Gaining.

There are many indications of the democratization of the Republican Party now proceeding apace at Cleveland. But that which is most striking, as well as most significant, is the States' rights movement, now gaining headway at a pace which promises to cause a complete reversal of the traditional attitudes of both major parties. It is one of those spontaneous movements which meets both philosophical needs and political exigencies, and therefore seems destined to become a major event in American history.

Heretofore it has never been certain that the Republicans would capitalize on the great opportunity voluntarily offered them by President Roosevelt. When the titular head of the Democratic Party finally scuttled all Jeffersonian traditions with the historic "horse and buggy" reference, it did not necessarily follow that the Republicans would rally to the jeopardized States' rights cause. To do so meant a breach with their own political theory, which from the time of Hamilton to that of Hoover has played down the value of the individual Commonwealth as a political entity, and emphasized the superior importance both of big business and of big governments.

It is no secret that all of Gov. Landon's platform suggestions have favored restoration of local autonomy, with the role of the Federal Government confined to establishing desirable standards and, where necessary, providing grants-in-aid to encourage the poorer and more socially backward States to attain these standards. But what is less widely realized is that all of the revisions so far made in Landon's original program have been in the direction of even greater decentralization. That is significant of the way the tide is running.

The emergence of the States' rights doctrine as a basic Republican principle is undoubtedly politically shrewd. It is also vital because it points a way to fiscal stability, since reassumption of responsibility by local government units would mean also sharp contraction of the present scale of Federal largesse. It has still further importance because it provides the channel whereby the growing political interest of the younger generation can operate to improve politics and social conditions from the ground up instead of from the top down.

But over and above these factors one hears an argument in Cleveland which may be expected to gather much weight and momentum during the coming campaign.

This is that the Federal Union, with 48 separate governments serving as national political laboratories while jealously guarding their constitutional identities, is the most effective guarantee of democracy, the most difficult hurdle for dictatorial ambitions that could possibly be conceived. It is not without significance that just a fortnight ago, in London, I listened to a Socialist member of Parliament making the same argument in behalf of the traditional American system.

Whether or not the State's rights trend renders desirable a platform plank meeting the difficulties raised by the Supreme Court's minimum wage decision, is now being closely considered here. The issue is complicated, has stimulated antagonisms and should be reserved for separate treatment. At the moment even such important technical considerations seem subordinate to the actual opening of the convention tomorrow.

"At length the period of expectation and preparation is over," to quote the words used by Viscount Bryce when he wrote "The American Commonwealth" more than 40 years ago, "and the summer sun rises upon the fateful day to which every politician in the party has looked forward for three years."

Landon State Leaders Claim All of 502 Necessary Votes

His Central Camp Puts Strength in Excess of 400, With Some Spokesmen Forecasting First-Ballot Nomination.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 8.—A compilation of delegate claims tonight disclosed that Landon State leaders in the various delegations were asserting possession of an aggregate of exactly the 502 conventioin votes needed to nominate.

In many instances these assertions were disputed by opposition leaders, although on both sides the spokesmen declined to give specific figures by States.

Landon central headquarters has confined itself to claiming in excess of 400, but some of the Landon spokesmen also have forecast a first-ballot nomination.

Knox headquarters has claimed 261, but has given no specific figures by States. A compilation of the totals claimed by various State leaders for Knox, so far as they have been ascertainable, falls far short of that figure, indicating that the Know managers hope for large accretions from the group of 164 delegates whose position has not been publicly indicated.

Borah managers claimed in excess of 100 and their leaders out in the State delegations have claimed considerably more.

The following delegate table shows the aggregate of the detailed claims by State leaders or indicated by the action of caucuses or State conventions and primaries. Where claims overlap, both are included, so that the grand total exceeds the actual number of delegates.

Students Hear Talk By Mrs. Roosevelt

Des Moines, Iowa, June 8 (AP).—Mrs. Roosevelt told the Nation's college youth today they are facing a new frontier of living.

Addressing 190 Drake University graduates and an audience crowding an auditorium seating 2,250 persons, she advised June graduates to change their criterion of success from a material standard to one of service as the most successful way of meeting and solving changing world conditions.

Mrs. Roosevelt was to leave tonight for St. Louis and Arkansas.

"The responsibility of the future rests with you," she said.

Mrs. Roosevelt asserted that "while there is a difference in the frontier of today from the frontier of yesterday, I feel we are still pioneers.

"As I go through the country and as I get letters from persons, I realize that hard as things still are, they are not as hard as some years ago.

"There is more hope abroad in the world.

"I know you young people . . . have been told many times how difficult it is for young people these days. I do not want to minimize that, but I'm not sure it is any more difficult than for the early pioneers."

Hoover SeeksQuiet To Work onSpeech

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 8.—Former President Hoover denied himself to all callers today to work on the address he will deliver Wednesday night before the Republican national convention in Cleveland.

He arrived here this morning en route from California to the Republican gathering and went at once to a hotel to whip his ideas into shape.

"He's too busy writing his speech to discuss what he will talk about," one of his traveling companions commented.

Earlier the former Chief Executive had answered inquiries along this line with:

"Let's leave that until the speech is made."

Major Platform Proposals

Cleveland, June 8.—As State delegations met today and tonight to select their representatives on the Republican resolutions committee, the following major planks appeared to have sufficient support behind them to force some recognition in the G. O. P. platform:

A statement that States, under their police powers, now have the right to legislate on wages and hours, but a constitutional amendment should be submitted "if necessary."

Social security in principle, but State administration of funds, to which the Federal Government would co[illegible]te.

Curtailment of spending, sufficiently to [illegible] some start toward balancing the budget within eight months, and a start toward reduction of the national debt.

Subsidies to farmers computed on a basis of the additional tariff costs on the goods they must buy; bounties paid only on that portion of crops domestically consumed.

A fixed value, stable dollar, with "a return to the gold standard" possibly going unmentioned; repeal of the Executive's power to devalue the dollar; international agreements toward stabilization.

Indorsement of bi-lateral trade agreements, without the "favored nations" clause now recognized in the reciprocal tariff law; specific approval of all such agreements by the Senate.

Junking of the World Court plank in the 1932 platform.

Administration of relief through State and local agencies.

A tight monopoly plank, probably going farther than the usual declaration in favor of full enforcement of the anti-trust laws.

Maryland Bloc Likely to Swing To Gov. Landon

Convention Bureau of The Washington Post.

Cleveland, June 8.—Notwithstanding the "pro-Nice" statement issued last night, the Maryland delegation still is regarded as a Landon delegation.

The 16 delegates of the Free State were pledged to Gov. Harry W. Nice for the Presidential nomination at the Republican State Convention more than a month ago. According to the resolution adopted then, the Maryland delegation belongs to Gov. Nice until he releases it.

Gov. Nice's actual goal is the Vice Presidential nomination, and his supporters are trying to make a trade whereby he will achieve it.

The Maryland delegation today voted to recommend former Senator O. E. Weller, of Baltimore, as national committeeman; W. P. Lawson, State chairman, as a member of the committee on permanent organization; J. Wilson Byron, of Hyattsville, committee on credentials, and Harry O. Levin, of Baltimore, committee on rules.

A squabble about tickets arose in the Maryland delegation today. Mrs. C. W. Gabriel, the outgoing national committeewoman for the State, arrived here before the others. She was given the 185 tickets to the convention due the Maryland delegation.

Dickinson to Get Early Iowa Votes

Cleveland, June 8 (AP).—Iowa delegates to the Republican National Convention tonight declared their intention of supporting Senator Lester J. Dickinson in early balloting on the Presidential nomination.

National Committeeman Harrison E. Spangler said after an Iowa caucus that each of the 22 delegates announced informally decision to support the Iowa Senator at the outset.

There was no showing of sentiment as to who might receive Iowa votes in later balloting if Dickinson's changes of winning out appeared too slim, Spangler said.

Senator Dickinson, himself, asked the delegation for its votes when he attended a caucus executive session at the delegation's request.

"I told them I wanted the 22 Iowa votes as long as it will serve the State's interests to give them to me," he said laer.

Steiwer Shuns Factional Tilts In Today's Talk

Keytone Due to Be Confined to Issues and Attack on Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 8.—The high spot on tomorrow's convention program appeared likely to be the keynote address of Senator Steiwer, of Oregon.

As he completed it tonight, it was taken for granted that he would say nothing that would harm or help one candidate over another, but would confine himself to a discussion of issues and an attack upon President Roosevelt and the New Deal.

Some of those close to Herbert Hoover predicted that the former President likewise would keep clear of candidate discussions when he comes before the convention Wednesday night.

Snell Talks Tomorrow.

Just as certainly, Representative Snell, of New York, will do so when he delivers his address as permanent chairman Wednesday afternoon.

The convention will be opened an hour before noon by Chairman Fletcher of the Republican National Committee. Aside from the usual prayer, there will be an address of welcome by Mayor Harold H. Burton of Cleveland, the temporary roll call and election of temporary officers and committees. Then will follow a recess until tomorrow night, with Steiwer's address virtually the only order of business.

Hoover Due Tomorrow.

Those close to Hoover said he would not arrive until Wednesday, probably in the afternoon. Following his own recent statement that he was not a candidate, it was stated definitely that no organized effort would be made to place his name before the convention.

Talk during previous days that Frank O. Lowden, former Governor of Illinois, was being discussed as a possible spearhead of a drive to "stop Landon" was heard almost not at all today. Close friends of Lowden said he would not consider entering the active political arena to any such extent.

Kansans Board Boat as 'Hotel' For Convention

Great Lakes Liner, Docked at Cleveland, Serves as Headquarters.

By the United Press.

Aboard Steamship Seeanbee, Cleveland, June 8.—A lot of nautical-looking Kansas Republicans, who haven't yet figured what two bells mean, boarded this Great Lakes liner tonight for a week's "cruise," anchored at the dock in Lake Erie.

The 350 boat riders, who couldn't find themselves hotel rooms for the Republican National Convention, are Landon men, to a man.

The cruise ship, anchored about a block and a half from the convention hall, is one of the finest on the lakes, all shiny mahogany, green carpets and smartly uniformed officers with gold on their caps. It even has a nautical smell of fresh varnish and steam.

The Kansans are receiving all the advantages of a long lake voyage with none of its difficulties—no high waves, no sea-sickness, no vibration from the engines: Only peace and calm, soft lake breezes and a deck steward to bring them tea.

The mate said he figured the passengers were getting a thrill out of the trip, they being from a district where water comes out of a faucet in the kitchen sink. He said several lady delegates had tried on their life preservers, just in case, an that the ship's bar is doing a big business in Landon cocktails.

"That is because Kansas is dry in more ways than one," the mate added.

One of the leading Republican sailors aboard is C. A. Burnett, attorney of Pittsburg, Kans., who acted as unofficial spokesman for the rest of the stationary travelers. He said he'd taken a lot of boat trips, but never one so fine as this. He said furthermore that Gov. Landon is going to be nominated sure as shooting and that he's going to be elected, too.

Stabbing Attempt Alleged.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Parsons, W. Va., June 8.—Failing to give bond of $500, set by Magistrate Andrew Hedrick here, Albert Pitzer, 50, tannery worker, is held in the Tucker County Jail to await action of the next grand jury here. Pitzer is charged with an attempt to stab McKinley Swearingen, Parsons chief of police, while being arrested for a minor offense.

Minister, Son Ordered Held in Brush Fire

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., June 8.—A true bill has been returned by the grand jury of Patrick County Circuit Court against the Rev. J. D. Cockram, Primitive Baptist minister, and his son, Ted Cockram, and a capias has been issued for their arrest. Cockram is said to have started a brush fire on his premises six weeks ago and to have failed to control it with the result that it got out of bounds and burned over several thousand acres of mountain land. The case will be heard at the next quarterly term, according to Commonwealth's Attorney Frank P. Burton.

Professor Is Chosen.

University, Va., June 8.—Dr. James Hart, of the faculty of Johns Hopkins University, will come to the University of Virginia as professor of political science. His appointment was announced this afternoon by President John Lloyd Newcomb, who made public plans for developing here a center for advanced study and research in problems of government to serve the entire South.

again and keep open the gate of equal opportunity now and in the years to come.

Urges Vindication of Faith.

"Unless we do this as Americans, and until this is done, our struggle for equality of justice under the law, equality of opportunity in every walk of life, will end only in catastrophe instead of in the victory that will vindicate our faith in ourselves and reaffirm our faith in our institutions. * * *

"Some of the other countries of the world are heading in opposite directions from democracy and freedom. The truth is we seem to be witnessing one of the great retreats of history. We shall have to decide whether this retreat of civilization shall spread to our own country, or whether this retreat shall be turned back from our shores before it is too late.

"As part of this question, you face a decision between two views. You will have to decide between a stationary society and one of progress and advancement. One of these views presupposes we have reached the end of the road in our national development. Now, this is not a particularly new view. Henry Adams wrote years ago, that over the last two centuries men frequently believed that a stationary period was near.

"The same belief was current in the early 1890's. Our business expansion up to then had been largely created by an expanding western frontier.

"Then, as now, some said that we had come to a halt, and that opportunity would be less in the future than in the past. But our people had faith in themselves and in the country's future, and they quickened that faith with works. A new era was opened up. This new era brought on many mistakes, many inequalities, and many sins of omission and commission. But in spite of its mistakes and inequalities it nevertheless produced the most wide-spread prosperity the world has even known, with more new things coming within the reach of the average man than ever before.

"The other one of these two views is held by those who insist that we have no more reached a stationary stage now than we had in the 90's.

"I do not believe that America has come to the end of the road of individual opportunity, and I would like to have you share that conviction with me."

OldDominion's Delegates Split Over Landon

Poll Finds Half Backing Kansan With Rest of Support Scattered.

Convention Bureau of The Washington Post.

Cleveland, June 8.—The State of Virginia, which supplied America with its first Presidents, is very much disorganized on the eve of the Republican National Convention.

So far as The Post representative can discern, the 17 delegates from the Old Dominion are divided half and half—50 per cent for Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, and the other half scattered among Knox, Vandenberg, Hoover and Steiwer.

The Virginia delegation held a caucus this morning. It adopted a platform as a model for the national convention and elected Col. Henry W. Anderson, of Richmond, to serve on the resolutions committee and present the platform.

There was talk tonight of a fight to oust Joseph L. Crupper, of Rosslyn, as national committeeman. Friends of Maj. Henry A. Wise, of Kitopeke, announced openly that they planned to put Wise over as committeeman.

The platform adopted at this morning's caucus of the Virginia delegation contained 18 planks. Among them were the following:

Integrity of the Supreme Court.

A sound currency with an adequate gold reserve.

Withdrawal of Government competition in private business fields.

Surplus disposals on foreign markets.

Agricultural aid through tariff, farm co-operatives and soil erosion prevention.

Co-operation with States in social security legislation.

Abandonment of "senseless experimenation in Government."

Collective bargaining rights for laborers.

Reduction of Government expenses and a balanced budget.

At the caucus H. B. McCormac, of Winchester, was named chairman of the delegation. Curtis Dozier, sr., of Richmond, was named secretary.

North Dakota's Caucus Shows Borah Is Choice

Cleveland, June 8 (AP).—North Dakota stood almost solidly for United States Senator William E. Borah for the Republican Presidential nomination tonight after the eight uninstructed delegates concluded their first caucus.

A poll of the delegates showed Borah had six votes and Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, one. The other vote probably will go to Borah, although this one delegate was represented as being friendly to Vandenberg, but agreeable to voting with the majority of the delegation.

ahead is rapidly demoting former leaders from the status of general staff to that of camp followers.

"Bill, you and I are almost the only members of the Old Guard to be found round here," said Charles D. Hilles to William Allen White last night. The famous Kansas Progressive recounts the incident with some glee, and a strong intimation that his reply to Hilles closely resembled that of Priscilla, when she told John Alden to "speak for yourself, John."

States' Rights Gaining.

There are many indications of the democratization of the Republican Party now proceeding apace at Cleveland. But that which is most striking, as well as most significant, is the States' rights movement, now gaining headway at a pace which promises to cause a complete reversal of the traditional attitudes of both major parties. It is one of those spontaneous movements which meets both philosophical needs and political exigencies, and therefore seems destined to become a major event in American history.

Heretofore it has never been certain that the Republicans would capitalize on the great opportunity voluntarily offered them by President Roosevelt. When the titular head of the Democratic Party finally scuttled all Jeffersonian traditions with the historic "horse and buggy" reference, it did not necessarily follow that the Republicans would rally to the jeopardized States' rights cause. To do so meant a breach with their own political theory, which from the time of Hamilton to that of Hoover has played down the value of the individual Commonwealth as a political entity, and emphasized the superior importance both of big business and of big government.

It is no secret that all of Gov. Landon's platform suggestions have favored restoration of local autonomy, with the role of the Federal Government confined to establishing desirable standards and, where necessary, providing grants-in-aid to encourage the poorer and more socially backward States to attain these standards. But what is less widely realized is that all of the revisions so far made in Landon's original program have been in the direction of even greater decentralization. That is significant of the way the tide is running.

The emergence of the States' rights doctrine as a basic Republican principle is undoubtedly politically shrewd. It is also vital because it points a way to fiscal stability, since reassumption of responsibility by local government units would mean also sharp contraction of the present scale of Federal largesse. It has still further importance because it provides the channel whereby the growing political interest of the younger generation can operate to improve politics and social conditions from the ground up instead of from the top down.

But over and above these factors one hears an argument in Cleveland which may be expected to gather much weight and momentum during the coming campaign.

This is that the Federal Union, with 48 separate governments serving as national political laboratories while jealously guarding their constitutional identities, is the most effective guarantee of democracy, the most difficult hurdle for dictatorial ambitions that could possibly be conceived. It is not without significance that just a fortnight ago, in London, I listened to a Socialist member of Parliament making the same argument in behalf of the traditional American system.

Whether or not the State's rights trend renders desirable a platform plank meeting the difficulties raised by the Supreme Court's minimum wage decision, is now being closely considered here. The issue is complicated, has stimulated antagonisms and should be reserved for separate treatment. At the moment even such important technical considerations seem subordinate to the actual opening of the convention tomorrow.

"At length the period of expectation and preparation is over," to quote the words used by Viscount Bryce when he wrote "The American Commonwealth" more than 40 years ago, "and the summer sun rises upon the fateful day to which every politician in the party has looked forward for three years."

Landon State Leaders Claim All of 502 Necessary Votes

His Central Camp Puts Strength in Excess of 400, With Some Spokesmen Forecasting First-Ballot Nomination.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 8.—A compilation of delegate claims tonight disclosed that Landon State leaders in the various delegations were asserting possession of an aggregate of exactly the 502 conventioin votes needed to nominate.

In many instances these assertions were disputed by opposition leaders, although on both sides the spokesmen declined to give specific figures by States.

Landon central headquarters has confined itself to claiming in excess of 400, but some of the Landon spokesmen also have forecast a first-ballot nomination.

Knox headquarters has claimed 261, but has given no specific figures by States. A compilation of the totals claimed by various State leaders for Knox, so far as they have been ascertainable, falls far short of that figure, indicating that the Know managers hope for large accretions from the group of 164 delegates whose position has not been publicly indicated.

Borah managers claimed in excess of 100 and their leaders out in the State delegations have claimed considerably more.

The following delegate table shows the aggregate of the detailed claims by State leaders or indicated by the action of caucuses or State conventions and primaries. Where claims overlap, both are included, so that the grand total exceeds the actual number of delegates.

Students Hear Talk By Mrs. Roosevelt

Des Moines, Iowa, June 8 (AP).—Mrs. Roosevelt told the Nation's college youth today they are facing a new frontier of living.

Addressing 190 Drake University graduates and an audience crowding an auditorium seating 2,250 persons, she advised June graduates to change their criterion of success from a material standard to one of service as the most successful way of meeting and solving changing world conditions.

Mrs. Roosevelt was to leave tonight for St. Louis and Arkansas.

"The responsibility of the future rests with you," she said.

Mrs. Roosevelt asserted that "while there is a difference in the frontier of today from the frontier of yesterday, I feel we are still pioneers.

"As I go through the country and as I get letters from persons, I realize that hard as things still are, they are not as hard as some years ago.

"There is more hope abroad in the world.

"I know you young people . . . have been told many times how difficult it is for young people these days. I do not want to minimize that, but I'm not sure it is any more difficult than for the early pioneers."

Hoover SeeksQuiet To Work onSpeech

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 8.—Former President Hoover denied himself to all callers today to work on the address he will deliver Wednesday night before the Republican national convention in Cleveland.

He arrived here this morning en route from California to the Republican gathering and went at once to a hotel to whip his ideas into shape.

"He's too busy writing his speech to discuss what he will talk about," one of his traveling companions commented.

Earlier the former Chief Executive had answered inquiries along this line with:

"Let's leave that until the speech is made."

Cleveland, June 8.—As State delegations met today and tonight to select their representatives on the Republican resolutions committee, the following major planks appeared to have sufficient support behind them to force some recognition in the G. O. P. platform:

A statement that States, under their police powers, now have the right to legislate on wages and hours, but a constitutional amendment should be submitted "if necessary."

Social security in principle, but State administration of funds, to which the Federal Government would co[illegible]te.

Curtailment of spending, sufficiently to [illegible] some start toward balancing the budget within eight months, and a start toward reduction of the national debt.

Subsidies to farmers computed on a basis of the additional tariff costs on the goods they must buy; bounties paid only on that portion of crops domestically consumed.

A fixed value, stable dollar, with "a return to the gold standard" possibly going unmentioned; repeal of the Executive's power to devalue the dollar; international agreements toward stabilization.

Indorsement of bi-lateral trade agreements, without the "favored nations" clause now recognized in the reciprocal tariff law; specific approval of all such agreements by the Senate.

Junking of the World Court plank in the 1932 platform.

Administration of relief through State and local agencies.

Convention Bureau of The Washington Post.

Cleveland, June 8.—Notwithstanding the "pro-Nice" statement issued last night, the Maryland delegation still is regarded as a Landon delegation.

The 16 delegates of the Free State were pledged to Gov. Harry W. Nice for the Presidential nomination at the Republican State Convention more than a month ago. According to the resolution adopted then, the Maryland delegation belongs to Gov. Nice until he releases it.

Gov. Nice's actual goal is the Vice Presidential nomination, and his supporters are trying to make a trade whereby he will achieve it.

The Maryland delegation today voted to recommend former Senator O. E. Weller, of Baltimore, as national committeeman; W. P. Lawson, State chairman, as a member of the committee on permanent organization; J. Wilson Byron, of Hyattsville, committee on credentials, and Harry O. Levin, of Baltimore, committee on rules.

A squabble about tickets arose in the Maryland delegation today. Mrs. C. W. Gabriel, the outgoing national committeewoman for the State, arrived here before the others. She was given the 185 tickets to the convention due the Maryland delegation.

Dickinson to Get Early Iowa Votes

Cleveland, June 8 (AP).—Iowa delegates to the Republican National Convention tonight declared their intention of supporting Senator Lester J. Dickinson in early balloting on the Presidential nomination.

National Committeeman Harrison E. Spangler said after an Iowa caucus that each of the 22 delegates announced informally decision to support the Iowa Senator at the outset.

There was no showing of sentiment as to who might receive Iowa votes in later balloting if Dickinson's changes of winning out appeared too slim, Spangler said.

Senator Dickinson, himself, asked the delegation for its votes when he attended a caucus executive session at the delegation's request.

"I told them I wanted the 22 Iowa votes as long as it will serve the State's interests to give them to me," he said later.

Steiwer Shuns Factional Tilts In Today's Talk

Keytone Due to Be Confined to Issues and Attack on Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 8.—The high spot on tomorrow's convention program appeared likely to be the keynote address of Senator Steiwer, of Oregon.

As he completed it tonight, it was taken for granted that he would say nothing that would harm or help one candidate over another, but would confine himself to a discussion of issues and an attack upon President Roosevelt and the New Deal.

Some of those close to Herbert Hoover predicted that the former President likewise would keep clear of candidate discussions when he comes before the convention Wednesday night.

Snell Talks Tomorrow.

Just as certainly, Representative Snell, of New York, will do so when he delivers his address as permanent chairman Wednesday afternoon.

The convention will be opened an hour before noon by Chairman Fletcher of the Republican National Committee. Aside from the usual prayer, there will be an address of welcome by Mayor Harold H. Burton of Cleveland, the temporary roll call and election of temporary officers and committees. Then will follow a recess until tomorrow night, with Steiwer's address virtually the only order of business.

Hoover Due Tomorrow.

Those close to Hoover said he would not arrive until Wednesday, probably in the afternoon. Following his own recent statement that he was not a candidate, it was stated definitely that no organized effort would be made to place his name before the convention.

Talk during previous days that Frank O. Lowden, former Governor of Illinois, was being discussed as a possible spearhead of a drive to

Kansans Board Boat as 'Hotel' For Convention

Great Lakes Liner, Docked at Cleveland, Serves as Headquarters.

By the United Press.

Aboard Steamship Seeanbee, Cleveland, June 8.—A lot of nautical-looking Kansas Republicans, who haven't yet figured what two bells mean, boarded this Great Lakes liner tonight for a week's "cruise," anchored at the dock in Lake Erie.

The 350 boat riders, who couldn't find themselves hotel rooms for the Republican National Convention, are Landon men, to a man.

The cruise ship, anchored about a block and a half from the convention hall, is one of the finest on the lakes, all shiny mahogany, green carpets and smartly uniformed officers with gold on their caps. It even has a nautical smell of fresh varnish and steam.

The Kansans are receiving all the advantages of a long lake voyage with none of its difficulties—no high waves, no sea-sickness, no vibration from the engines. Only peace and calm, soft lake breezes and a deck steward to bring them tea.

The mate said he figured the passengers were getting a thrill out of the trip, they being from a district where water comes out of a faucet in the kitchen sink. He said several lady delegates had tried on their life preservers, just in case, an that the ship's bar is doing a big business in Landon cocktails.

"That is because Kansas is dry in more ways than one," the mate added.

One of the leading Republican sailors aboard is C. A. Burnett, attorney of Pittsburg, Kans., who acted as unofficial spokesman for the rest of the stationary travelers. He said he'd taken a lot of boat trips, but never one so fine as this. He said furthermore that Gov. Landon is going to be nominated sure as shooting and that he's going to be elected, too.

Stabbing Attempt Alleged.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Parsons, W. Va., June 8.—Failing to give bond of $500, set by Magistrate Andrew Hedrick here, Albert Pitzer, 50, tannery worker, is held in the Tucker County Jail to await action of the next grand jury here. Pitzer is charged with an attempt to stab McKinley Swearingen, Parsons chief of police, while being arrested for a minor offense.

Minister, Son Ordered Held in Brush Fire

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., June 8.—A true bill has been returned by the grand jury of Patrick County Circuit Court against the Rev. J. D. Cockram, Primitive Baptist minister, and his son, Ted Cockram, and a capias has been issued for their arrest. Cockram is said to have started a brush fire on his premises six weeks ago and to have failed to control it with the result that it got out of bounds and burned over several thousand acres of mountain land. The case will be heard at the next quarterly term, according to Commonwealth's Attorney Frank P. Burton.

Professor Is Chosen.

University, Va., June 8.—Dr. James Hart, of the faculty of Johns Hopkins University, will come to the University of Virginia as professor of political science. His appointment was announced this afternoon by President John Lloyd Newcomb, who made public plans for developing here a center for advanced study and research in problems of government to serve the entire South.

again and keep open the gate of equal opportunity now and in the years to come.

Urges Vindication of Faith.

"Unless we do this as Americans, and until this is done, our struggle for equality of justice under the law, equality of opportunity in every walk of life, will end only in catastrophe instead of in the victory that will vindicate our faith in ourselves and reaffirm our faith in our institutions. * * *

"Some of the other countries of the world are heading in opposite directions from democracy and freedom. The truth is we seem to be witnessing one of the great retreats of history. We shall have to decide whether this retreat of civilization shall spread to our own country, or whether this retreat shall be turned back from our shores before it is too late.

"As part of this question, you face a decision between two views. You will have to decide between a stationary society and one of progress and advancement. One of these views presupposes we have reached the end of the road in our national development. Now, this is not a particularly new view. Henry Adams wrote years ago, that over the last two centuries men frequently believed that a stationary period was near.

"The same belief was current in the early 1890's. Our business expansion up to then had been largely created by an expanding western frontier.

"Then, as now, some said that we had come to a halt, and that opportunity would be less in the future than in the past. But our people had faith in themselves and in the country's future, and they quickened that faith with works. A new era was opened up. This new era brought on many mistakes, many inequalities, and many sins of omission and commission. But in spite of its mistakes and inequalities it nevertheless produced the most wide-spread prosperity the world has even known, with more new things coming within the reach of the average man than ever before.

"The other one of these two views is held by those who insist that we have no more reached a stationary stage now than we had in the 90's.

"I do not believe that America has come to the end of the road of individual opportunity, and I would like to have you share that conviction with me."

Senator Denies Breaking Down Of Merit Plan

Republicans Challenged by O'Mahoney to Produce Better Record.

By James D. Secrest.

Making the first direct reply to mounting charges that the Roosevelt Administration has sought to break down the merit system in Government service, Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, yesterday on the Senate floor hurled a challenge at the Republicans to produce a better record.

Senator O'Mahoney, a former First Assistant Postmaster General under James A. Farley, is co-author with Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, of a bill to extend the civil service to all postmasters and other Government employes now outside the classification act.

Recalling that President Wilson had set aside tradition and provided by executive order that candidates for postmasterships should be tested by the Civil Service Commission, O'Mahoney said President Harding had subsequently canceled the order.

Assails Spokesmen.

Senator O'Mahoney assailed certain spokesmen for Federal employes, who have an interest in maintaining a huge personnel in Washington, "for hurling the cry of spoils at the Administration because some of the new agencies are not under civil service."

Charges President Roosevelt "has proceeded to break down the civil service system are based upon a series of allegations, appearing in press and magazines, every one of which was made by writers who failed to get the facts before proceeding to indict the Administration," he asserted.

The Wyoming Senator listed the following agencies which have been placed under civil service, either by act of Congress or by executive order, during the Roosevelt Administration:

Securities and Exchange Commission, Federal Communications Commission, Railroad Retirement Board, Bituminous Coal Commission, Motor Carrier Bureau of the Interstate Commerce Commission, Social Security Board, Labor Relations Board, public utility regulation under the Wheeler-Rayburn act, Soil Conservation Service, Alien Property Custodian, Farm Credit Administration, U. S. Railroad Administration, Central Statistical Board and certain positions in CCC camps.

Serious Obstacle.

Coming to the defense of the provision of his bill exempting emergency agencies from civil service and to the policy of the Administration in failing to extend the merit system to them, O'Mahoney said:

"To bring such agencies into civil service would be a long step toward making them permanent branches of the Government and certainly would contribute a serious obstacle to their demobilization when their purposes have been served."

He added that President Hoover had set a precedent for this policy by exempting the Reconstruction Finance Corporation from civil service laws in its organic act.

Citing the Works Progress Administration as an example, he pointed out that this agency exists only so long as the appropriation which supports it. Were its employes to be placed under civil service, he pointed out, demobilization would be almost possible when the emergency passes.

President Roosevelt has issued executive orders, O'Mahoney said, transferring 8,511 positions from the exempt to the classified service. He has permitted "literally thousands of Republicans who held office under previous administrations" to continue in their positions.

"I say that the Roosevelt Administration lived up to its promise to establish the temporary, emergency agencies on a non-partisan basis and to conduct them with the sole thought in mind of doing what was best for the great mass of American people," he declared.

Emergency agencies are not the first Government bureaus to be specifically exempted from civil service, the Wyoming Senator pointed out. A classic example of permanent establishments so treated, he said, is the Bureau of Investigation of the Justice Department. With the exception of some finger-print experts, he explained, Bureau employes have never been under civil service.

"But that does not mean that the Bureau of Investigation is not operated under the merit system or that it is a prey to spoilsmen," he added. "Far from it, as events of the last year or two have demonstrated."

Vandenberg All Way, Is Michigan's Decision

Cleveland, June 8 (AP).—The Michigan delegation adopted a resolution tonight to support Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg for the Presidential nomination until the conventions adjourns. The resolution was adopted unanimously.

Proposals to support Vandenberg all the way was made by former Gov. Fred W. Green, of Michigan, who urged the delegates to stand by their favorite son "not half-heartedly or for one or two ballots but until the convention adjourns."

was brought that the pamphlet, "Influence or Merit" was written expressly for the Republican National Committee.

"By his action Babcock has been guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer of the federation," the resolution charged.

"He has brought great discredit to the American Federation of Government Employes by placing it in a partisan political position contrary to the provisions of the national constitution of the federation.

"Because of such action and the condition resulting therefrom the usefulness and effectiveness of Babcock as president of the federation is destroyed and the continuation of him in office renders it impossible for our organization successfully to carry out the aims and purposes for which it was organized."

The resolution requested the national executive council of the federation to submit the issue to a recall vote.

Signatories to the resolution were Charles T. Hoffman, president of the lodge, and Sarah B. Allison, its treasurer.

"I shall be at the hotel tomorrow morning for the council meeting if I can make it," Babcock said last night, though admitting the physician's advice was to remain in bed for two days.

He branded as illegal the afternoon session of the council, which was called to order shortly after he was stricken in the hotel lobby and lapsed into unconsciousness.

At this session, presided over by Mrs. Bernice B. Heffner, national secretary, a resolution was adopted accusing Babcock of conduct unbecoming to an officer and recommending his recall as head of a Government workers' union, which has more than 30,000 members.

Introduced by James B. Burns, a vice president, the resolution charges Babcock's pamphlet, which was distributed by the Republican National Committee, made derogatory statements against President Roosevelt and has brought "great discredit to the A. F. G. E. by placing it in a partisan, political position."

"While we fully believe that he should be suspended," it continues, "it is felt that the dismissal of President Babcock will be more expeditionsly effected through the operation of the recall proceeding recommended to the lodges by this council."

According to a spokesman for the council, the action was approved unanimously.

The intense ill feeling existing among the A. F. G. E. rulers was betrayed by comment on Babcock's heart attack.

"I realize," he said, "that my illness will be put down by some as an attack of convenience. Well, I was treated by a physician (Dr. J. Ernest Mitchell) and I was ren-

Babcock reiterated that he will not resign because "I'm not going to desert the rank and file who elected me." He predicted that if balloting is conducted fairly and without intimidation, he will be supported in the recall referendum by 75 per cent of the membership.

He defended his anti-spoils pamphlet, denied reports that he was paid for writing it and stressed its importance as an effective blow in favor of the merit system.

A defense of the present Administration's personnel program was voiced yesterday by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming. He labeled "unfounded and unfair" accusations which have been made by "certain political leaders desiring to discredit the Administration and certain heads of employes' organizations whose only desire is to maintain a large permanent personnel here."

president emeritus who has no voting privilege, voted on the morning session resolution demanding the president's resignation. When he said he would not step out, a motion was made and seconded recommending A. F. G. E. lodges throughout the country to initiate recall proceedings.

This action led to Babcock's issuance of the following statement:

"When I wrote the material which later became Bulletin No. 3, I told the truth, I spoke as a citizen of the United States.

"The Executive Council of the American Federation of Government Employes is composed largely of Government officials whose jobs are involved in the situation which has developed. Their 'brain trust' in Washington was on the spot. I can't find it in my heart to say much against the council. They just had to make a demonstration against me 'or else.'

"My statement was intended to hamper the use of 'spoils' methods in the future.

"I am permitting my recall to go to the membership (rather than resigning) because my mandate comes not from Federal officials who are members of the Executive Council but from the great numbers of members who are not Government officials who constitute the real federation. If they are permitted to vote on this recall without intimidation, I believe that they will approve of my attack on 'spoils.'

"During my term as president (2 years and 9 months) the membership had advanced from 2,600 to 33,604. When I was elected to office the federation had $11,000 of debts. Today the money in the bank exceeds the amount of all outstanding obligations.

"During this time pay restoration and restored leave have been obtained.

"The next major problem to attack was spoils. I have attacked as vigorously as I could, in fact so vigorously that I am being tried for that vigor.

"That is the record.

"Let the members decide." —

LET KIDNEYS FLUSH OUT 3 LBS. A DAY

Clean Out 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes

Nature put over 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters in your kidneys to strain the waste matter out of the blood. Kidneys should pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter.

When the passing of water is scanty, with smarting and burning, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your body may take up some of these poisons causing serious trouble. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, which have been used successfully by millions of people for over 40 years. They give happy relief and help the kidneys to flush out 3 pounds a day. Insist on Doan's Pills. (Advt.)

Alabama's Vote Today to Settle Spirited Fight

Huddleston-Patrick Race, Marked by Bottle Blow, to Be Decided.

By the Associated Press.

Birmingham, Ala., June 8.—Democratic voters will say the last word tomorrow in the political battle Representative George Huddleston climaxed by hitting his opponent with a sauce bottle.

Arrayed against the veteran of 22 years in Congress in a second primary is Luther Patrick, radio entertainer and poet. New Deal loyalty and the racial issue figured in their spicy campaigns.

One other Congressional race, in which R. T. Simpson, jr., of Florence, and John Sparkman, of Huntsville, seek the seat vacated by A. H. Carmichael, is to be decided tomorrow.

All other State-wide contests were settled in the first Democratic primary May 5. Nomination means election in Alabama.

The Patrick camp attacked Huddleston's New Deal record. The Representative shot back, "I voted for most of the bills the New Deal wanted; but I voted against some because my conscience wouldn't let me do otherwise."

The racial question was injected by a Huddleston supporter who charged William Mitch, campaigning for Patrick, was made president of the Alabama Federation of Labor by "Negro votes."

Huddleston, while disclaiming any part in the racial issue, termed Mitch a "carpetbagger" from Indiana, under instructions of John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers' president, "to destroy me because I voted against the Guffey coal bill."

California Silent.

Cleveland, June 8 (AP).—Adhering to its mysterious role, California's delegation to the Republican Convention decided to night to defer until Wednesday morning at the earliest any expression of preference for Presidential candidates.

W. Va. Re-elects 2 To National Seats

Cleveland, June 8 (AP).—West Virginia's delegation to the Republican Conventio tonight re-elected its two members on the national committee.

National Committeeman Walter S. Hallanan, Charleston, and Mrs. Cara L. Ebert, Parkersburg, national committeewoman, were chosen unanimously. The State caucus also chose A. A. Lilly, Charleston, as its chairman, and named representatives to serve on six convention committees.

Supporters of Gov. Alf M. Landon for the Presidential nomination, headed by Hallanan, predicted 15 of the 16 votes would go for the Kansas executive in all probability on the first ballot.

The State delegation elected these convention committee members unanimously:

Permanent organization, Howard Sutherland, Elkins; rules and order of business, T. C. Townsenr, of Chaleston; resolutions, John H. Meek, Huntington; credentials, Hallanan; member to notify Presidential nominee, David D. Ashworth, Beckley; member to notify Vice Presidential nominee, George L. Bowers, Mannington.

Landon Assured Of Most N. C. Votes

Cleveland, June 8 (AP).—With perhaps one or two exceptions, North Carolina's 23 votes in the Republican Convention today were assured for Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, with announcement that Federal Judge I. M. Meekins, a "favorite son" candidate, had agreed to relese eight votes pledged to him.

Clarence Dozier, Elizabeth City, Meekins' representative here, said after a long distance telephone talk with the Judge that he had instructed him to release the pledged delegates on the first ballot if it looked as though Landon could win on the first roll call.

The pledged delegates will be released after a first ballot regardless, Dozier said. All the State's other delegates are unpledged.

Tennessee for Landon.

Cleveland, June 8 (U.P.).—Tennessee's 22 votes will go to Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas on the first and succeeding ballots, Representative J. Will Taylor (Republican), Tennessee, said after the State's delegation had caucused tonight.

The District's Defenders.

The District owes a vote of thanks to Senator Thomas and his sub-committee colleagues for the skillful way in which they have handled the 1937 District appropriations bill. Not only have they courageously refused to sacrifice the welfare of Washington to the political demands of the House; they have also kept the underlying issue in the controversy so clearly before Congress that the group seeking to deprive the Capital City of all Federal aid has been kept almost constantly on the defensive.

Too often in the past the Senate has made concessions to the House faction merely to permit enactment of District supply bills. But this year the House so grossly overplayed its hand, that a vigorous stand was essential to prevent inexcusable penalization of local taxpayers. In spite of this provocation, the Senate sub-committee in charge of the supply bill has acted with the utmost fairness. When the deadlock occurred its only appeal was to reason and fact.

As a matter of course, the Senate sustained the committee in this position. And it is becoming increasingly apparent that the House will have to do likewise. This sincere and unbiased effort to work out, from a factual study, a proper fiscal relationship between the national and local governments can not be resisted by open-minded legislators. It can not be resisted, that is, unless the House faction demanding a lower Federal contribution is ready to confess to an arbitrary persecution of this voteless community.

Foreign Capital In The U. S.

On the basis of a most comprehensive survey, the Department of Commerce estimates that foreign holdings of American stocks, bonds and other long-term investment amounted to about $5,035,000,000 at the end of 1935. Bank balances and other short-term funds belonging to foreigners approximated $1,200,000,000. During the year the value of long-term investments had increased by $765,000,000, partly as the result of new purchases and partly through a rise in the level of stock prices. These gains, together with the rise in short-term investments, brought the total volume of foreign investments to the impressive figure of $6,235,000,000—an increase of over $1,300,000,000 during a single year.

For a number of years the inflow of capital into this country has exceeded the outflow, leading to a rise in foreign holdings of American securities and repurchases of American-owned foreign bonds and obligations. Following devaluation of the dollar, this capital inflow was greatly stimulated by the economic and political uncertainties which led to a capital flight from various European countries. Hopes of speculative profit also accelerated the inward movement.

Due to these factors and the return of American funds from abroad, the United States has gained huge amounts of gold during the past two years. In 1934, our net receipts amounted to $1,131,000,000 and in 1935 to $1,700,000,000. In the early part of the current year, the inflow fell off markedly. However, at the end of April the growing political disturbances in France intensified the flight from the franc and brought about a resumption of gold movements on a large scale. Since April 24, approximately $325,000,000 of gold has been engaged for shipment to this country, a large proportion of this total being acquired last week.

These mass movements of foreign capital are reflected not only in larger security purchases and rising security prices but also in additions to the excess reserves of our banks. A return flow of such nervous capital would mean pressure to sell American holdings, with a resultant deflationary effect upon security prices. The duration and extent of the gold inflow also has a very direct bearing upon the trend of long-term interest rates because of its effect upon the volume of excess reserves. And, of course, the danger of credit inflation is enhanced by any developments that help to keep excess reserves at abnormally high levels.

So long as erratic capital movements continue, they constitute a source of danger, whether funds are coming into or going out of a country. The only ultimately satisfactory solution of the serious problems of credit control arising from the international migration of capital on a huge scale lies in restoration of stable political and financial conditions here and abroad. Meantime, every effort should be made to neutralize the effect of large accessions of capital that are likely to be withdrawn as quickly as they have been received.

States' Rights At Cleveland.

Beneath the hubbub that is stirring Cleveland as the Republican National Convention opens today a note of unusual gravity may be detected. Observers on the scene report that there is a minimum of ballyhoo, parading and partisan celebration. For the chief actors in this momentous drama keenly realize the historic importance of the efforts they are making to change the course of our political evolution.

Many of the principles for which the Republican Party has stood have been relegated to the background by events of the last four years. At the same time new issues have arisen out of the Roosevelt Administration's attempts to bring about recovery by setting up "new instrumentalities of power" in Washington. These problems may well stimulate extraordinary deliberation at Cleveland, for if the G. O. P. is to meet the challenge squarely it must drop its historic emphasis upon the desirability of a strong central government, and assume the traditional position of the Democratic Party.

The strong sentiment already manifest at Cleveland in favor of a States' rights plank may be construed in partisan circles as an expedient appeal to anti-New Deal Democrats. But it cannot be so easily dismissed. The G. O. P. is virtually forced into this position by the Administration's flagrant disregard of constitutional restrictions upon Federal powers. Effective opposition to a dangerous tendency demands a shift of emphasis. Certainly any party which seeks the support of the rank and file should be willing to modify its viewpoint when the American system of government appears to be in jeopardy.

Republican devotion to the idea of a strong central government grew out of the Civil War period when the unity of the Nation was threatened. Now, when national unity is beyond question and the trend is rather toward the exercise of dictatorial powers in Washington, it is not essentially inconsistent for the G. O. P. to become the champion of States' rights. In each case it is a question of preserving the balance of governmental authority—of upholding the American system.

If the Republican Party has the courage to pose this issue, regardless of arguments used under different conditions, voters going to the polls next November will be confronted by one of the most important questions arising in recent American history. Heretofore, a great majority of our social and economic issues have been fought out in State legislatures directly representing the people. Experiments producing favorable results in one State have been duplicated in others. Less desirable undertakings have been abandoned after tests in one or two State "laboratories" without disturbing the equilibrium of the entire country. This system of applying local policies to local problems could not be permanently changed without terrific repercussions that would closely affect the lives of the people.

The current trend away from local self-government undercuts virtually all the questions of policy likely to be dealt with in the Republican platform. If the G. O. P. meets that issue in a straight-forward manner, it will make a real contribution to the national welfare.

The Texas Centennial.

Expositions are usually staged to point contrasts—favorable contrasts. But it is doubtful whether the Texans who arranged the displays now opening throughout the Lone Star State in celebration of the hundredth anniversary of its independence from Mexico had any thought of presenting such contrasts as are reported from Dallas and Fort Worth.

At the former, Secretary Roper opened a mammoth fair, dedicated to the memory of Texas' founders, by expounding a philosophy of Federal guardianship as remote from the thinking of 1836 pioneers as is the airplane from the prairie schooner. And in Fort Worth a contrast more easily laughed off is about to be presented in the shape of "50 Eye-bedeviling Coryphees" stomping daintily in the footsteps of the hard-bitten crew who first settled that notorious cow-town.

It would be unfair, however, to conclude that the centenary program as a whole is out of key. All information seems to indicate rather that entertainment typical of the Lone Star Commonwealth is in store for the thousands who will flock southward this summer. They will find the Dallas display enticingly different from Chicago's Century of Progress exposition. Instead of garish modernism in architecture, for instance, they will be treated to a taste of Spanish colonial design with faint touches of Mayan and Aztec influences. And, being in a rural neighborhood, they will note greater stress laid on agrarian and livestock exhibits, though the automobile assembly plants and other examples of mechanical progress will not be lacking.

Most unique, visitors will discover the "Cavalcade of Texas" presented on a moving stage to depict the expeditions of Coronado, De Soto and Ponce de Leon, the rise and wane of the missions, the opening of the Chisholm and Goodnight Loving trails, the piracies of Jean Lafitte, the frontiersmen's march across the Sabine, the Alamo massacre and the exploits of such heroes as Austin and Houston.

But even more important, the traveler to Texas may gain a new point of view. No one who journeys into that vast domain of more than a quarter-million square miles—tasting its dust and beholding its horizons, viewing its wealth and counting its variety, meeting its people and sensing their strong self-reliance—can fail to note an exhilarating effect. Many a visitor may return to his fireside rocker with a new and truer perspective on America.

Uneasy Austria.

"It is high time for decisive action," wrote Archduke Otto of Hapsburg to the latest Austrian village publicly to favor restoration of the monarchy and to vote the young pretender honorary citizenship.

His impatience is understandable. Any day a thrust from the north or an internal explosion may bring about that union between Germany and Austria which the Germans and many Austrians desire and all the rest of the world dreads. Should that happen, it would end forever the Hapsburg dream of returning in triumph to the scene of past glories. Yet a great many obstacles that once stood in the way of a restoration have been removed. Actually but a single barrier remains.

Austria today is better prepared for a restoration than at any time since the late King Charles and Queen Zita fled from Vienna at the close of the World War. The anti-Hapsburg laws have one by one been wiped out. The principal Austrian opponents of the Hapsburgs—the once-powerful Social Democrats, Prince von Starhemberg's Heimwehr, the Nazis—are for the moment either in eclipse or impotent. The men who dominate Austria, Chancellor Schuschnigg, for instance, believe that only by becoming a kingdom can its independence really be maintained.

And now, if rumors are true, Premier Mussolini, once hostile to the restoration idea, has been won over to it. He is even said to have promised Dr. Schuschnigg to back Otto's return with Italian bayonets. Obviously the gap between the Hapsburg hope and its possible fulfillment has become tantalizingly small.

Yet it can scarcely be taken for granted that a Hapsburg restoration is in prospect. An enormously difficult obstacle in the form of the bitter opposition of the Little Entente remains to be overcome. These nations—Yugoslavia, Rumania and particularly Czechoslovakia—do not like to contemplate the disturbance in Europe's balance of power that would follow Anschluss. They want Austria to be independent. But they see no advantage, and many disadvantages, in a Hapsburg restoration.

They contend that if the Hapsburgs should return to Austria restless ambition would drive them to seek re-establishment of the old monarchy. Even if this did not take place, they fear that the Austrian throne would serve as a rallying center for discontented minorities within their borders.

Indeed in the case of Yugoslavia and to a lesser but still vital extent Rumania, Anschluss would be preferable to restoration. Again and again they have warned Austria that the moment the attempt is made to restore the monarchy would see their armies given marching orders. From the Little Entente meeting in Bucharest over the week-end a similar warning has been issued.

It is difficult to believe that Austria, in the belief that it will be backed by Italy, will defy these nations. But if it does, the fat will truly be in the fire in Europe.

Another Benefaction.

Fortune is smiling on universities in these parts. Scarcely had the University of Maryland accepted the gift of the first unit of an extensive new institute of transport when the American University announced that a bequest will make possible the construction of a hall for advanced study in international affairs and social science. Washington will share largely in the advantages to result from these donations.

The success of the American University's promised extension is not guaranteed merely because Washington is the Nation's Capital and thus the clearing-house for its international dealings. As with the College Park undertaking, the new addition will demand the utmost in careful administration if it is to fulfill the hopes of its benefactor. Brick walls do not a college make. The personnel of the advisory committee already selected, however, augurs well for something more than bricks in the new memorial.

Who says that optimism is dead in the land? Listen to this classified ad.: "Have lost track of most of the books from my private library. Will friends who have borrowed them please return them?"

"Our grandfathers got along without going on diets or paying any attention to vitamins," observes a writer. Yes, and just dig up an old album and look at them.

"I haven't the slightest idea as to what's wrong with this country," asserts a writer who undoubtedly must cut his own hair.

Merits Of 'Tobacco Road.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If it would not be too impertinent to continue a controversy that should have ended some weeks ago, I would like to defend the merits of "Tobacco Raod".

As a play this production needs no defense; it is quite able to stand on its own merits—both as a great drama and as great literature. However, since the opposition have put their Fascistic literary cudgels to work, it becomes necessary to arise and defend the turnip eaters with the same sang froid we use defending the bean and cod eaters of Boston. It is not even a question of class, but purely an esthetic principle—a principle that savors as much of caviar as beef-stew. Of course, our sectarian opposition would never admit this, since their vision seldom extends beyond Little Lord Fauntleroy and Channing Pollock.

Like Moliere's "Tartuffe; ou L'Imposter", we expected this social document of Caldwell to offend. Not in the Rabelaisian sense, but in a general, critical sense. The opposition are in the position of backfence or tea-room gossips who discover that even though Mrs. Swankfront's yard has been well kept she has left her garbage in the alley for a long while. This all goes to prove that its not how you offend, but whom you offend, that counts.

The persons objecting to "Tobacco Road" must confine their criticism to its earthy and wholesome poor-white humor because they are not honest enough to come out and say that they object to a play giving a true picture of the semi-starved condition of the submarginal and marginal land and people of the South. Every honest person admits that conditions are far worse in the deep South than the play admits. It is evident that an unbalanced diet, widespread poverty and illiteracy are not going to make Emily Post puppets out of an unfortunate class—victims of the machine and greed.

That Erskine Caldwell discovered these wretched, forgotten people, and spoke for them, is a tribute to the generation of American writers who refuse to blind their eyes to the world around them; who—like Zola, Barbusse, Sinclair, Passos, Maxwell Anderson, Odets, Irwin Shaw and others—are building a great American literature.

The honest author or artist is a credit to his (or her) craft—the day of the head-in-sand ostrich writer who sat on an ivory tower and turned out page after page of entertaining but empty verbiage is past. Today's artist, by necessity, is surveying the contemporary scene with a clearer vision than ever before—such problems as poverty, the bread-line, academic freedom, sweat-shops, trade unionism, international relations, war and Fascism are his by inheritance and daily participation in the life around him.

For Caldwell to live among the conditions he describes and remain silent would have been a very dishonest thing to do. There are enough intellectual Fascists in the South as it is, but Caldwell is not one of them.

Crime And Economics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to write a few broad yet not impractical considerations about crime. Crime as a study is as profound as it is full of the pith and pathos of living individuals. Aside from crimes of passion and of the psychologically abnormal, we view the whole social-economic structure and watch the lone individual go his struggling, often hazardous, way through life. We see the exceptional succeed and read of his glorious deeds in the pages of the news and history. We overlook that all other men could not do what the exceptional has done, even if they were given the opportunity. The disparity and difference of natural qualities accounts for this.

All men as members of society are theoretically entitled to equal rights and physical protection before the law. Furthermore, individual nature is persistently growing and functioning until it dies. So any social-economic system that thwarts or denies this normal growth does so at the cost of mental and physical deterioration, crime, and even breakdown or revolution.

Until crime is looked upon as a consequence of operations of the social-economic system as a whole, then crime is doomed to remain with us and to involve billions in expenditure for hiring specialists to detect criminals and wardens to guard their closeted and embittered lives. Crime will be with us until the causes of crime are removed—they go beyond the individual criminal, the product largely of social-economic factors and conditions not of his creation.

Democrat Who Will Vote Republican

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The New Deal has had three years of time, billions of dollars and almost blanket authority, and what has it done constructively and destructively with time, money and authority? This is the question that the bulk of Americans, regardless of party, should ask themselves, now that an orderly change of government is possible.

I am a congenital Democrat, a poor man, but above all an American, and I think the Deal has been one big mess from start to what I believe will be the finish next November. It has spent billions in silly, wasteful and even destructive ways and yet it only cries for more and more money. It has neither plan nor intention to balance our budget and its tax bills are either penalties aimed at classes or persons or absurd school room theories of wealth sharing. It has not only refused to see the necessity for production, trade and transportation, but has done almost everything, often deliberately, to frighten, hinder and harass every form of business life.

It has almost destroyed our workable, if not ideal, party system and it uses the great Democratic Party as a mere tool. It has deliberately tried to unbalance and destroy our three-power governmental system and substitute a mixture of fascism, class room idealism, and personal whim, centering around a whimsical administrative center. Because after subduing our spineless Congress, it found American courage in the high courts, it sought and still seeks, directly and indirectly, to weaken and destroy these courts so that its strange purposes may not be thwarted by a solemn Constitution.

It has steadily worked to destroy our Federal-State system and thereby concentrate all power in the hands of its clique here in Washington. Instead of laws it has substituted proclamation and bureau edict and instead of open deliberation it has substituted secret conferences attended by favorites and satellites. Bureaucracy, that deadliest enemy of all governments, it has raised to a state that would make Red Russia envious and in feeding this gigantic job machine it has flouted every precedent and law and openly stuffed the offices with flunkeys and favorites.

The Administration is neither communist nor fascist. It is not anything definite. It is a group of theorists, idealists, fools and fixers, and it offers us only the evils of the Italian and Russian systems and leaves only the evils of our own. This, in my opinion, is what we are asked to keep in power and I believe that it is equivalent to asking for the utter destruction of our country. The Republican Party is not an aggregation of angels and wise men, but at least it offers us a chance to catch ourselves before we come to that inevitable end. As for myself, I have chosen to make my ancestors turn over in the grave and vote straight Republican, not as a Republican but as an American.

Protest Mr. Bingham.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Ambassador Bingham's favorite thesis is that the United States should become a part of the British Empire, taking its place with the other dominions and colonies. Ordinarily, he is content to urge this transformation on the ground that the United States is a democracy, England is what he calls a democracy, and therefore they should be united. He is today more than ever of this opinion because a new English ship has just failed to beat the ocean record.

This notion would be grotesquely diverting if it were not at this time so deadly dangerous. The only construction the average European mind can put upon the ambassador's extraordinary utterances is that in the quarrel developing between England and Italy, the United States will stand by England. Coming from a man in so high a position in the government, such a conclusion is inevitable.

It is extremely perilous fooling. The United States has nothing on earth to do with the dispute between England and Italy. If it remains a republic, the United States will give to England neither their material, moral nor any other kind of support. Any other impressions about its course is totally erroneous and can lead to nothing but trouble.

It is no part of the business of any ambassador of the United States to proclaim a servile allegiance to the country to which he is accredited. This country has no more interest in England than it has in any other nation with which it is at peace. All look alike to it; all should be treated alike by its ambassadors and other hired men. We protest against Ambassador Bingham's latest transgression as an affront to the intelligence of the nation that hires him.

Betwixt And Between.

To the Editor of The Post— Sir: Now that neither the National Government nor the State government has jurisdiction over hours and wages, and it being self-evident that county and municipal authorities extendeth not, we understand that anybody may work one of either sex any number of hours for any wage—even 12 hours for $1—provided the victim consents.

As ridiculous as such statement appears, is it not true? If the victim does not consent we all rise up in a mighty chorus and shout: "Why don't you work, loafer"

No Stags Or Dogs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: They told us to wait and see the parks when their work was done.

As for Lafayette and the little triangle between Eighteenth and Nineteenth on Pennsylvania avenue, the work is done apparently according to plan, but they lack the cast-iron stags and dogs appropriate to that style of art.

And if some Congressman will introduce a bill to change the names of Pennsylvania avenue and Lafayette Square to Main street and Babbitt Square, all will have been achieved.

Referee Needed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Democracy calls for and requires the protection of a helpless minority against a ruthless and tyrannical majority. Should such a situation ever arise, the Supreme Court, with its interpretive powers, is the one and final haven that insures this protection.

We can change the rules of the game; we can broaden the field of play as much as we desire, but let us always retain that necessary referee to see that no score is counted—no matter how excellently maneuvered—which is made by going outside the bounds.

Country Doctor

THERE is comfort and companionship in an old road; an old road you have grown up with; "an old road" in the sense of "an old friend;" a road with memories. You know every turn and twist of it; every house and barn and tree by its side. Every mile of it has its own story; a whole library of stories.

This is true with most of us. It is doubly true with the country doctor. He knows the inside of all the houses and is the kindly keeper of their secrets. He has ministered to nearly everybody in the district; brought many of them into the world.

He is the one man everybody runs after.

There is an old English rhyme that runs: "When a man's a little bit poorly he makes a fuss and wants a nurse and thinks he's going to die most surely. He sends for a doctor who makes him worse."

It is true an ailing man makes a fuss, but he doesn't want a nurse. He doesn't think he is going to die immediately, but he wishes there were a little more fun in living at the immediate moment. It is his wife who sends for the doctor. And the doctor doesn't make him worse, but better, a whole lot better, the minute he appears.

This is particularly true of the country doctor, the general practitioner, who covers the county, receives everybody's confidences, works night and day, and sleeps when he can.

You, my dear sir, one day discover you are not so young as you used to be and, like a bear with a sore head, you go bellyaching about it to your wife and she, thinking there is something really wrong with you, quietly and secretly sends for the doctor, who by and by arrives and says, "Well, who's sick here?"

You tell him nobody's sick, but you're glad to see him on general principles, and he looks in your eyes and he taps your knees and sounds your chest and puts a dingus on your arm and knows what ails you. After which he neither parades his learning nor tells you brutally that at your age you may expect your arteries to harden. Instead he tells your wife she did well in calling him, as you needed attention; which pleases you. You can hurt no man's feelings by telling him he needs a little service. And he tells you you'll be all right with a little care; and that pleases you, too, for you don't want to be too darned sick. And presently he goes off to attend to some really important cases and you feel very much better even before taking the medicine he left for you.

Old Doc Cheerio, diplomatist and psychologist!

Here's a man forever going around doing good who never consciously thinks of himself as philanthropist or benefactor of mankind. He doesn't even believe himself particularly smart; or, rather (since modesty in any man with the proper amount of self-confidence consists merely in ability enough, tact enough, to conceal his own opinion of himself), he never lets you guess he has any such thought.

But you may with reason suspect him of exceptional cleverness. Since in every man there is the germ of every art (else the great authors, painters, poets, musicians, actors, would lack admirers—and sustenance) beyond question there are among the country doctors men who might, in different surroundings, in different circumstances, have taken rank among the great surgeons and scientists of the world.

The doctor must appear to know it all. That is part of his beneficent power. And he really knows more about you than you suspect. All the chances are, Mr. Farmer, you told him more when you were talking of the stock, the field crops, the garden truck and the weather than when you were talking of yourself. And when you talk shop, your shop, the doctor knows your subject. He has a sort of farm of his own. Also in the absence of a vet he has played midwife to a cow; a tiresome job; not nearly so exciting as when, perforce, he played sheriff to a sheep-killing dog.

Didn't I tell you a country doctor's life knows some variety? There was a time when he walked round and round a tree for over an hour and didn't know when nor where nor how he was going to come out; for on the other side of the tree's trunk there was a belligerent bull and no stick nor stone within reach.

Ay, every time I see the doctor I am filled with admiration. He knows more than his father of the horse and buggy days and his instruments and medicine and methods are more up-to-date, but his heart is of the same strength and texture. His car (usually mud-covered, for journeys are constant and backroads plenty), enables him to cover more ground with greater ease, but he can't sleep on the way home as his father did while the old horse quietly jogged.

Take it all in all, I can think of no more useful life than that of the country doctor. He might easily make more money with less work; he might conceivably win fame and fortune in another sphere of influence; but I very much question if he could elsewhere do more good in the world than he is already doing; or know more happiness in its accomplishment.

Fair Enough

Bobbing Champion.

Cleveland.

Those who attended the Republican Convention of 1924 find Cleveland a city of strange contrasts as the Republicans gather again in the same hotels and in the same meeting hall to nominate their man for President. The Republicans were up and arrogant then and the Democrats were lean and hungry and fighting among themselves. The Anti-Saloon League, a native Ohio corporation, was the invisible government, the city was full of prohibition cops and the big barroom of the Hollenden Hotel was a murky tomb where an old-fashioned bartender with patient resignation slid foaming chocolate ice-cream sodas across the mahogany counter.

The factory chimneys were hot, money was on the loose and the industrial leaders, the substantial citizens, had a smug way of saying that, regardless of their personal habits, prohibition was a good thing for the workingman, for business and the country. Unable to get drunk over the week-end, the workingman showed up Monday mornings with a clear head, a steady hand and a heart full of loyal enthusiasm for his tasks.

* * * *

The workingman was well in hand when the Republicans gathered to go through the perfunctory business of nominating Calvin Coolidge and there was no cloud in the sky to suggest that a dozen years later the Republicans would meet again in an atmosphere of fear, futility and weakness to quibble, but not really fight, over the selection of a man for the doubtful honor of going down to a glorious defeat at the hands of a strange Government in Washington. If this be prophecy, make the most of it, for there are strong indications that the only purpose in holding a Republican convention at all this year is to maintain the party's franchise.

Twelve years ago bootleggers skulked in the halls of hotels delivering merchandise in queer packages to the rooms of the dry statesmen and the great gathering of journalists, and one of the famous editors of the time, a man earning $200,000 a year, was picked up and tucked into the local jail for several hours for toting a personal quart of hootch up to his room in the elevator.

* * * *

On Sunday, under the Ohio law, the corner saloon is supposed to be shut, but, as in prohibition times, scofflaws are among us. Sunday was a hot, muggy day on the shore of Lake Erie and patriots sat around in their rooms in their underwear, sipping tall gin drinks and wiping the sweat off the glasses on hand towels. Possibly some forehanded souls laid in provisions the night before, but those who neglected to do so could make arrangements with local providers.

Many statesmen of 1924 are dead, including Mr. Coolidge and Senator Frank Willis, the Ohio dry who boasted that he could yell louder than any other orator in the land and delighted to do so, hurling great blasts of sound out of the side of his mouth. Al Smith, who fought the Democratic convention to disruption that year, has become a Democratic Nicholas Murray Butler, and among the Republicans the only old familiar name before the convention is that of William E. Borah. Landon, Knox and Vandenberg are new names, new characters and all of them have needed deliberate and methodical introduction even to the men of their own party, to say nothing of the voters.

* * * *

The Landon boom, if you must call it that, is conducted from a big ballroom in the Hollenden, a few doors away from the headquarters of the Hearst newspaper interests. This proximity is mere coincidence, of course, but a matter of sarcastic amusement and flippant comment. The Landon people, for no reason that any competent campaign manager can think of, have selected for their campaign song Stephen Foster's "O, Susanna," a rather incoherent Negro number, meaningless, monotonous and probably the worst thing Foster ever wrote. They have a huge pile of mimeographed sheets in the ballroom and these are passed out eagerly to anyone who will accept them.

The Landon workers also fasten miniature sunflowers on the lapels of casual visitors, and there is a fussy, well-meaning atmosphere in the big room, with elderly ladies smiling brightly at all comers and inviting them to sign the register. Three musicians with an accordion, mandolin and violin play "O, Susanna" over and over again, but nobody undertakes to sing.

A flash-bulb twinkles and the small crowd turns to discover a white-haired Kansas woman standing before a large signboard portrait of Gov. Landon and raising a glass of ice water. Is that intended as a dry gesture? Oh, goodness, no. No significance at all. The lady was merely toasting Gov. Landon in her favorite beverage. No political significance at all, you may be quite sure.

* * * *

There is a band in the street in blue uniforms, but they don't play much music. They seem to be waiting for something, and they have been waiting all day.

Hundreds of newspaper writers, from the heavy duty political thinker and essayist to the eager new leg-man who has yet to learn what it is all about, mingle with the patriots who would like to get together and turn the rascals out of Washington. But there seems to be no story beyond the most ordinary routine, for the party is weak and listless and the proud strength and confidence of 12 years ago are only a mocking memory.

It makes one a little sad for the Republicans. They had their faults, no question, but it is not pleasant to see an old champion bobbing on his heels and muttering that he is as good as ever when anyone can see that rich living and that beating four years ago took it out of him and left him a hollow shell.

Mexico Will Join

Correspondent Scouts Objections Of Communist Leader, Believing Nation Will Join Gladly In Buenos Aires Conference.

By Jeffrey Paul.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Mexico City.

THE EXTRAORDINARY Pan American Congress which is scheduled to meet in Buenos Aires next December finds Mexico viewing the matter with an approving eye. Long a believer in international cooperation, arbitration and conciliation, Mexico will take an active part in the discussions at the Argentine capital.

It is a peculiar, though pertinent fact, that, despite years of internal discord since she secured independence in 1821, Mexico seldom has gone to war with a foreign power. Against Spain's attempt at reconquest in 1829, the United States in 1847, and France in the famed "pastry cook war" over debts in 1839, and to support of Maximilian's empire, 1864-1867, mark the only times in her history that Mexico has sent her soldiers against those of another nation. The Pershing expedition and the Vera Cruz bombardment in the 1914-1916 era are parts of another pattern, and there never was a formal declaration of war.

Apart from such armed action, Mexico has as good a record as most Latin American nations when it comes to conciliation and arbitration. Host to the Pan American Congress in 1902, when Porfirio Diaz was at the height of his dazzling career, Mexico was carrying on a tradition that had endured since the Congress of Panama in 1826. Although she failed in her endeavor to arrange other American conferences in 1831, 1838 and 1840, the southern republic has ever looked to peaceful action rather than armed force in the settlement of international disputes.

Mexicans In General Favor December Meeting.

MEXICANS in general are heartily in favor of the Buenos Aires conference. But it would be very strange indeed if there were not some opposition to the conference. That opposition is best voiced by Vicente Lombardo Toledano, radical labor leader and self-appointed messiah to lead Mexican labor out of the capitalistic wilderness.

Toledano has embodied his arguments in three articles. The first, entitled "Argentine on the Eve of the Pan-American Peace Congress," carried the message that the progressive South American republic was controlled by English and American capital. The congress, wrote Toledano, is nothing more than a scheme for "Yankee capitalism to reduce to a minimum . . . the economic and political influence of English imperialism in the great countries of the south, patricularly in the Argentine Republic." Thus, the "financial oligarchy of the enighboring country" would be guaranteed an outlet for its goods and capital "when the rest of the world flames with the fire of a new international war."

These sentiments, along with figures quoted by Toledano, aroused the ire of the Argentinian Ambassador. He replied in a letter that was published in the same paper as Toledano's article, El Universal. The labor leader took a sound trouncing, but as is his wont, made no reply to the verbal lashings of the Ambassador.

Toledano Decries U. S. As Capitalist Schemer.

SHORTLY afterward, Toledano published a second article called "The Dangers of an American League of Nations." Once again, the United States was revealed as the capitalistic schemer which wanted, first, to get the Latin-American governments to abandon the League of Nations, and second, to form an American league. Such a program could end only in disaster, Toledano asserted, and summed up the catastrophic results under eight points:

1. American capital was to be safeguarded in case of a new international war.
2. The new league would make it impossible for the weak Latin-American peoples to look to Europe for aid in their future conflicts.
3. The cultural horizon of the hemisphere would be reduced to the American continent.
4. There would be complete economic and political submission of the Latin-American nations to Yankee imperialism.
5. There would be competition among the various nations to see which could better serve the United States in the economic terrain.
6. The poverty of the masses would be augmented.
7. There would be the loss of the rights won by the proletariat of Latin America in the last quarter-century.
8. The right to be free would be postponed indefinitely.

This horrendous picture can be explained easily if one remembers the communistic leanings which Senor Toledano makes no attempt to conceal. He does not hide his contempt for the Roosevelt-Hull "good neighbor" policy and blames all the evils of Latin America on the capitalistic system. His recent attempts to get into the good graces of American labor are linked with his expressed wish to unite Latin-American syndicates into a single body, which he dreams of controlling from Mexico City.

Fear Voiced That U. S. Would Play The Tyrant

TOLEDANO'S third essay against the Buenos Aires conference bore the title, "Arbitration in America's International Conflicts." For a third time, the United States was unmasked as playing the part of "perpetual judge of the Latin-American nations." He could not see how American judges could be fair to their neighbors when the interests of the United States were at stake. Again, he asked "how could Mexico apply sanctions against the United States if such a judgment were dictated?"

Going further, he cited the Chamizal and "Pious Fund of the Californias" cases as instances which Mexico lost "without its rights being taken into account, solely because it was a weak nation . . ." Anyone who has studied these cases will know that Lombardo fell into a pit of his own digging at this point, since no one forced Mexico to arbitrate the disputes and they were decided on their merits by as disinterested bodies as it was possible to assemble. Nor did he add that Mexico has paid nothing on Pious Fund claims since 1914.

Aside from this stand of Toledano's, Mexican opinion is decidedly favorable to the congress. Naturally, there has been reason for distrust of the United States in years gone by, but the actions of Secretary of State Hull at Montevideo in 1933 and his subsequent activities on behalf of better understanding have helped to dissipate old fears and prejudices. The Roosevelt declarations against the use of armed force and of intervention in the political affairs of our neighbors have been followed by solid and satisfying deeds which only a rabid radical would overlook.

Signs Of Defection From Geneva Vanishing.

AS REGARDS the League of Nations, Mexico has shown no disposition to withdraw. The recent anti-League pronouncements of senators belonging to the "left wing" have not been well received and it appears that the Cardenas government will continue to take part in League affairs.

Although in January, 1933, Mexico gave the two-year notice necessary before withdrawal from the League becomes effective, the action was canceled in May, 1934. Last spring, Mexican representatives took an active part in the discussions of sanctions against Italy, urged on, no doubt, by those government forces at home which are extremely antagonistic to such political setups as fascism and national socialism.

As matters stand now, it would appear that Mexico sees nothing incompatible between membership in the League of Nations and possible membership in an American League. With the exception of exports to Spain and the United States, Mexico is far more concerned in fostering trade with her sister republics. It is, therefore, reasonable to assume that she will bend every effort to make peace and concord the basis of future relations among Latin American states as well as with her northern neighbor.

Nanking Ships Reported Sent To South China

Others Declared Ready to Sail; War Unlikely, Says Gen. Chiang.

By the Associated Press.

Hongkong, June 8.—The Chinese National (Nanking) government was reported to have sent warships to southern waters today as leaders of the Catnon (South China) regime continued warlike manifestations against Japan.

A squadron of 15 Nanking warships was said to have reached Amoy, Fukien Province.

Another report from Nanking said Japanese warships at Formosa were under orders to be ready to sail for Swatow, Kwangtung Province, part of the Canton territory.

(A Canton dispatch quoted Gen. Li Chung-Jen, commander-in-chief of Kwangsi Province forces, as saying Kwangtung and Kwansi would fight Japan with or without help from Nanking. Negotiations are under way now between Canton and Nanking.)

War Unlikely, Says Chiang.

Nanking, June 8 (AP).—Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, leader of the Chinese national government, stated tonight he was confident there would not be civil war between North and South China and that there would be no war against Japan.

"I am sure," said the generalissimo, "the leaders of Kwangtung and Kwangsi provinces (composing South China) will not seize upon the diplomatic policy of the central government as an alibi to start a civil war.

"The real situation in the southwest at present is not entirely know, but common sense tells us the authorities there could not have plans to mobilize their troops. Such a thing would be folly during the present national crisis."

He added the question of declaring war or peace could be decided only by the central government.

Said Gen. Chiang, "the southwest's spirit of national salvation and desire for national solidarity are in direct accord with the central government."

He indicated he refused to believe dispatches from Canton describing the mobilizatoin of armies in Kwangtung and Kwangsi provinces.

Church Closes Annual Parley; Merger Voted

Methodist Episcopal Conference Names Williams to Washington Post.

By the Associated Press.

Westminster, Md., June 8.—The 152nd annual Baltimore conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church closed today after cleaning up odds and ends of routine business and hearing the list of pastoral appointments to churches on the Western shore of Maryland, the District of Columbia, and parts of Virginia and West Virginia.

The Rev. Phillip Edwards, of Washington Grove, Md., suggested that all conferences after the one in 1937 be held here. This proposal will be passed on at the 1937 meeting. The delegates gave a rising vote of congratulation to Bishop and Mrs. Edwin Holt Hughes, of Washington, who celebrated their forty-fourth wedding anniversary today.

The Methodist Episcopal delegates closed their session just two days before the Methodist Protestant delegates will come here for their annual meeting. The Rev. O. G. Robinson, minister of Centenary Church here and host to the Baltimore conference, was appointed head of a committee of five to greet the Methodist Protestant delegates.

The conference voted to merge with the Methodist Protestant Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church South. The Methodist Protestant delegates will vote on the proposal on Saturday.

Bishop Hughes, addressing the closing meeting, said the conference had been an ideal one. He particularly lauded the harmony among the delegates. The Rev Arthur H. Thompson, a former member of the conference, was requested by the meeting to return. Dr. John Edwards, transferred from this conference at the close of the session, occupied the chair for a few minutes during today's final session.

New superintendents were named by Bishop Hughes for Washington and Frederick. G. Willis WWilliams succeeds Benjamin W. Meeks in the Washington district and Harry Evaul succeeds Frank Steelman in the Frederick district. The superintendents of the East and West Baltimore districts remain in their posts.

of the fact that the territory he is invading is looked upon as safely Democratic.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, and Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC, are aboard the train.

On the return from Texas, the President will stop June 14 at Vincennes, Ind., to participate in the dedication of the George Rogers Clark Memorial. He also will stop at Hodgensville, Ky., the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln, for a brief ceremony. He will return to Washington Monday.

The first visitors yesterday were Speaker of the House William B. Bankhead and Representative Steagall (Democrat), Alabama. They discussed the general legislative situation. Bankhead said he believed Congress would be able to finish its work and go home by the end of next week.

The President then went into conference with Postmaster General James A. Farley and Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr. They were quickly followed by WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins and then Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes. The sessions were described as purely routine.

Mr. Roosevelt will be accompanied on his Southwestern jaunt by Mrs. Roosevelt, who will join the train at Memphis, Tenn. She now is in Tennessee inspecting a Federal project in which ish is interested.

At Fort Worth Friday night they will be the guests of their son, Elliott, and his wife, Ruth, who make their home on a ranch. The next morning they will head northeastward by the way of Dennison, Tex., where a speech will be delivered from the train platform.

Lewis Predicts Debtor Nations Plan New Offer

England, Italy and France Will Seek Payment With Goods, Senator Says.

By the Associated Press.

Default by Great Britain on its June 15 instalment coincided yesterday with a prediction on Capitol Hill that the French, British and Italian governments soon would make new proposals for settlement of their war debts to the United States.

The prediction was made by Senator Lewis, of Illinois, long a bitter critic of war debt defaulting nations. State Department officials said, however, they had not heard of such moves

Lewis described a plan by which he said the three European powers would offer goods and services to this country, to be credited to their existing obligations.

A few hours earlier the State Department made public a note from the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, conveying notice to Secretary Hull of his government's default on a $668,474,071 payment falling due next Monday.

The British note was the first word from the 13 debtor nations, which will owe a combined total of $1,160,122,766 on June 15. General expectations were that all except Finland would follow Great Britain's lead in new defaults. Finland thus far has met all its payments promptly.

Senator Lewis said:

"I have been expecting the British government to continue its policy of declining to pay cash at this time as it did in its past due five payments."

novel, it would take a place well up in the ranks of thrillers.

Attacked by Mexican bandits, saved from an ignoble death at the end of a Boer rope in the Transvaal, jumping from poverty to wealth, seeking adventure from one side of the globe to the other—these were only a few of the instances in the active life of one of the world's best-known and most able engineers.

Occupant of vermin-ridden shacks on the frontiers of the earth, he was also the silk-hatted special ambassador of the President of the United States to the Court of St. James. At one time too poor to hire an office boy, he later named his own fees for his services. His friends ranged from the wooly gold miners and plainsmen of the Far West to kings, princes and emperors. He was a close personal friend of Theodore Roosevelt; knew Mark Twain, Rudyard Kipling and Rider Haggard; was the confidant of Cecil Rhodes and "Barney" Barnato, and was received by the last Czar of Russia. Yet through all his varied career Mr. Hammond remained a quiet, unassuming American citizen.

His ancestry and the surroundings in which Mr. Hammond spent his youth were such as would stir the spirit of adventure in almost any boy. His forbears were among the early and notable settlers of the country. His father, a native of Maryland, was graduated from West Point, and served as a major in the War with Mexico. His mother, a Tennesseean, was the sister of Col. John C. Hay, famous in the early history of Texas. The Hammonds settled in San Francisco after the war, and John Hays Hammond was born there March 31, 1855.

Watched Miners as Boy.

As a boy he rubbed shoulders with the sturdy gold miners of his home State and used to spend his vacations with them, watching them pan gravel and dirt. At 10 he was a practiced hunter and a sure shot. He early showed an aptitude for mineralogy, and after public and private schooling, his father sent him to Yale, where he was graduated in 1876 with the degree of Ph. B. from the Sheffield Scientific School. Yale later conferred upon him the degree of A. M.

He followed that course with three years' study at the Royal School of Mines at Frieburg, Saxony, and returned to this country to open his office as a gold assayer. His father wanted him to be a railroad engineer, but he preferred mining and refused an excellent position with a railroad. It was at this time that he had to sweep out his own office. A few years later he could have hired all the office boys a modern skyscraper would hold.

He then went with the United States Geological Survey as a special expert examining California gold mines, and was able to tell his father that had he been consulted, he could have prevented the loss of nearly all his parent's money in valueless gold property.

Two years later he heard the call of the almost unknown west coast of Mexico and made his way there on horseback to the southern gold fields, where he fought with bandits and helped stand off with rifles a party of revolutionists bent on murder and destruction. Finding this venture unprofitable, he returned home with $50 in his pocket—and found employment as consulting engineer for a Western railroad. He became successively consulting engineer for various other concerns, several in Mexico, and was sent into every corner of that land and South America.

Employed by Barney Barnato.

Mr. Hammond's expertness in judging mining properties attracted the attention of "Barney" Barnato, the leading figure in South African exploitation in the last century, who employed him to go there to develop his mines, and at his own figure, which was placed high even by comparison with present day standards. Later he was connected in similar capacities with the British South Africa Co. and the Randfontein Estates Gold Mining Co., but left them to accompany Cecil Rhodes, in whose dream of colonial empire he placed the greatest confidence. He became Rhodes' firm friend, and the latter thought so much of his ability that he sold most of his valuable property, to the horror of his other councilors, and invested in gold lands suggested by Hammond, which today produce at the rate of $75,000,000 annually.

Hammond was then well known in Great Britain, but did not attract much notice in his own land until just previous to the Boer War, when he was one of the four leaders of a "reform committee" at Johannesburg which attempted to adjust the administration of "Oom" Paul Kruger, President of the Transvaal Republic. Krueger, according to Hammond, was a "robber and grafter who believed the world was flat and the Devil had a tail."

Hammond's name was connected with the famous Jameson raid against Kruger, but the committee, he explained later, composed largely of Americans, did not operate under the British flag, and was not in sympathy with Jameson.

Kruger sent the olive branch to Hammond, who treated with him, but by a ruse the Boers obtained possession of the committee's arms, then arrested them all. The four leaders were offered safe conduct from the country, which they refused, hence they were tried and convicted for "high reason" by a Boer council, and sentenced to hang within 24 hours. The 60 other members of the committee were liberated on payment of fines of $10,000.

Thought End at Hand.

"The gallows was built and I certainly thought I was to be executed," Mr. Hammond said when the danger had passed.

While he was in prison awaiting trial, Mark Twain, then visiting Africa, dropped in on the committee members, and told them he was "glad to see so many lawyers among the prisoners and only one newspaperman."

The imprisonment raised a storm of disapproval in England and this country, and prompted Secretary of State Olney to send Kruger a warm message demanding Hammond's release, which effectually forestalled the noose. Hammond probably never knew he owed his life to a Washington newspaperman, who persuaded the Secretary to dictate the cablegram. Olney was disposed to let Hammond take the consequences of what was then believed to be a rash invasion.

At any rate, Kruger, after having the death sentences for the four commuted to life imprisonment, told his council they were worth more to the Boers alive than dead, and offered to free them if they paid fines of $125,000 each. Oom Paul's act netted his republic more cash then it ever had in its treasury before.

The engineer returned to England, where he became connected with various mining companies, and later to the United States, where he was associated with American financiers in several projects, buying up rich mine properties and developing them. He was interested in other ventures, however, such as irrigation and reclamation and hydro-electric enterprises. Once he visited Russia with the aim of investing American capital in Siberian mines. Again, he offered to organize a syndicate to build a railroad in Ireland from the newly opened coal fields of Leinster to the industrial center of the north. At another time he offered to open irrigation projects in the Turkestan desert of Kara Cum.

In 1911, Mr. Hammond was a defendant in several long drawn out suits for damages, in which it was charged he misappropriated stock certificates of a company he organized to develop a ginning machine that was expected to revolutionize the cotton industry. He was victorious in one suit, brought by Daniel J. Sully, "the cotton king," but when sued by two others of the company, a Baltimore court passed a verdict against him, declaring that while he was not personally responsible, he was liable for negligence in superintending the return to the plaintiffs of the stock certificates. The case finally was compromised.

Mr. Hammond was awarded the degree of D. E. by St. John's College and by Stevens Institute of Technology. He was a member of many clubs and societies in this country and England, and was elected president of the American Institute of Mining Engineers. He was a prolific writer on scientific and engineering subjects, and lectured in many American universities.

In 1911 President Taft appointed Mr. Hammond special ambassador and personal representative at the coronation of King George V. His name was offered as nominee for Vice President with Taft, but was rejected. He was high in Republican Party circles and served a term as president of the National League of Republican Clubs.

In 1912 he was president of the Panama-Pacific Exposition Commission that visited Europe in the interests of the great organization. In 1915 and 1916 he was chairman of the World Court Congress, and in 1922 President Harding appointed him to the United States Coal Commission, erected to investigate the coal industry after the mine strike of that year. His associates elected him chairman of the body.

He maintained palatial homes in Washington and Gloucester, Mass., and offices in London and New York, where he was general manager of one of the world's greatest and most powerful exploration companies.

In 1880 Mr. Hammond married Miss Natalie Harris, of Mississippi. Three children were born to them, and John Hays Hammond, jr., who inherited much of his father's scientific genius, became a brilliant inventor before reaching his thirtieth year.

Among his achievements were several hundred inventions for the development of radio telephony and telegraphy; a system of radio control of war vessels from shore; the application of the same system to the control of torpedoes from shore stations for coast defense; and the aluminothermic incendiary projectiles used by the allies in the World War.

One of Hammond's hobbies was yachting, in which he took an active part throughout his last years.

On March 31, —ast—his eighth birthday—he published an autobiography.

The autobiography related how he once faced death fighting off Mexican revolutionists.

A year ago the Boys Club of America singled him out for its annual medal for his interest in Boys Club work.

He headed such groups during the last two decardes as the Federal Coal Commission, the National Civic Federation's department on current economic and political movements and President Hoover's commission which investigated the Navy League of the United States.

Eleven years ago he quarreled with Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, over the justification of miners in the Pennsylvania anthracite region. He spoke out against blocs in Congress as dangerous to the public morale, and early in the '20s asserted that if the United States frankly followed "dollar diplomacy" it would be better for the world.

He once opposed the recognition of Soviet Russia.

Hammond was one of those strongly urging a Pan-American Union of nations in a sort of supreme court of the Americas.

D. C. Veterans To Get Bonus Next Tuesday

Final Plans for Mail Delivery Completed; Safeguards Set.

Final details for Monday night's opening of city-wide bonus bond distribution were completed yesterday at a meeting of veterans' organization leaders in the office of Postmaster Vincent C. Burke.

Veterans were again warned that registered letters containing bonus bonds and checks will be delivered only to addresses. Postal carriers have been instructed to secure personal identification before making deliveries.

Sealed in heavy manila envelopes, the bonds are pouring into the City Postoffice by hundreds of thousands. The bonus section of the division of loans and currency, Treasury Department and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing have been working double shifts in order to supply bonds for the first day's distribution.

Postmaster Burke said he would press every available Postoffice employe into service when deliveries start Monday night. In order to aid distribution and rapid delivery, veterans are urged to remain at home with proper identification ready.

Through veterans' organizations, plans are ready to send "certifying officers" to various sections of the city. These officers will be sent to veterans' headquarters, Government departments and business houses, where a sufficient number of veterans desire to have their bonds certified in order to receive Government checks in return. The checks will be written on the City Postoffice and will be mailed soon after bonds are surrendered.

Representatives of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Disabled American War Veterans met with Postmaster Burke yesterday.

Father Asks The Post to Aid In Finding Missing Cleo Parker

Girl, 14, Disappeared From Home Near District Wednesday Night; Police on Lookout; Several Others Are Being Sought.

Summer wanderlust, puppy love that blooms in the spring and school examinations were held responsible yesterday for the current "epidemic" of children in their teens running away from home.

Latest in the present series is 14-year-old Cleo Parker, whose father, Jacob, appealed to The Post yesterday to aid in locating her. She disappeared from her home on Walker Mill road, near District Heights, Md., sometime between 9 p. m. Wednesday and 5 a. m. Thursday.

Other boys and girls being sought by District police, all of whom were reported missing in the last few days, are:

Marion Speirs, 13, of 3912 First street southeast; Evelyn Wines, 15, 3760 Nichols avenue southeast; Gloria Elaine Carter, 15, 831 Eighteenth street northwest, and Dora Hayes, 17, 3205 Duke street, Alexandria.

"This season of the year usually sees the greatest nmber of missing children," said Actnig Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken, head of the Women's Bureau. "I suppose the reason, speaking of the girls, is worry over promotion in school nad examinations. Also, perhaps, boy friends. The boys pick this time of year to run off because there are more places to attract them and, with the weather favorable, it's easier to get there."

Missing children reports are coming into the Women's Bureau at the rate of three nd four aday but the absentees are located or return home in a day or so in most cases.

Although she was scheduled to graduate from the Bradbury Heights (Md.) school this month, the Parker girl is believed to have left home because "school holds no glaumor for me."

That was the substance of a note she wrote to a boy friend at school and which was uncovered by her father yesterday. He said he has reported her disappearance to Maryland, Virginia and New York, as well as Washington police.

Evidently she slipped out of the house in the night while her father and stepmother were asleep, Parker said. He described her as a large girl for her age, being 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighing 150 pounds. She has blue eyes and blond hair. A checkup of her wardrobe revealed the only clothing missing was a pair of brown slacks, sweatshirt, blue coat and tennis shoes.

The Speirs and Wines children were reported missing Sunday.

Schuschnigg's Aids Will Stage Power Display

Parade Today to Serve as Stern Warning to Starhemberg.

By the United Press.

Vienna, June 8.—Austria's new iron-willed chancellor, Kurt von Schuschnigg, will stage a huge mass meeting of the fatherland front at Vienna City Hall tomorrow as a blunt warning to Prince Ernst von Starhemberg against any plans to regain the dictatorship.

Twenty thousand sub-leaders from all sections of the nation will attend the meeting, which was described officially as designed to show that 1936 is a "year of purgation" and that a "new epoch was started in Austria's Renaissance movement."

However, diplomatic observers are convinced the meeting is being staged with the prime object of serving a stern warning on the erstwhile leader of the fatherland front that the Heimwehr, Starhemberg's private army, is a thing of the past.

Schuschnigg will review a parade of the sub-leaders, who are expected to be joined by at least 100,000 Viennese members of the fatherland front.

Later, Schuschnigg will address the organization.

Every means of propaganda has been utilized to make the demonstration gigantic and impressive, surpassing those which Vienna staged during the last nine months in tribute to Starhemberg and Maj. Emil Fey, who, before he was ousted from the cabinet last October, was the most influential leader of the Vienna Heimwehr.

The city was plastered with huge posters announcing the meeting. Residents were instructed to fly flags. Loud speaker systems are being installed in all city squares, halls and restaurants.

The whole purpose of the meeting appears to be Schuschnigg's desire to impress the world in general, and Starhemberg in particular, that he has the backing of virtually the entire nation and that he will not stand for interference either by the Heimwehr or Nazi organizations.

The meeting is given added significance in view of Schuschnigg's recent conversations with Premier Benito Mussolini. It is believed they discussed the political future of Austria, including possible rapprochement with Germany and restoration of the Hapsburg dynasty.

Fog Balks Buck In Flight to Set Mark for Speed

He Completes 621-Mile Hop From Here, But Declines to Post Record.

Disappointed at his poor showing because of bad weather, Bob Buck, 22-year-old flier from Westfield, N. J., announced last night that he would not claim the 1,000-meter world speed record he set yesterday, but would made a second try either today or tomorrow.

Since no speed record for the distance for planes weighing between 450 and 900 pounds exists, all Buck had to do to establish a record was to complete the 621-mile course. Blocked by strong winds, intermittent showers and a low fog, Buck averaged only 69.85 miles per hour.

Much of the poor showing, he explained, was due to the thick fog that hung over Floyd Bennett Field, New York.

Buck took off from the Washington Airport, passing the starting line at Bolling Field at 6:37 a. m. Running into fog at Baltimore, he climbed above the fog and continued to New York, which he reached an hour and 55 minutes after the start. So thick was the fog over the Floyd Bennett field that for almost two hours, Buck had to circle the field before he found a "silver lining" that led him down into the field.

From Floyd Bennett Field, the young flier went on to Willoughby Spit, at New Norfolk, Va., and then back to Bolling Field, landing here at 3:31 in the afternoon.

His Hair Roots are NOT Dead

Hair roots are a part of the human body and do not "die" as long as the body itself lives. They become inactive when (1) they are attacked by some local scalp disorder (such as dandruff) or (2) when they have not received sufficient nourishment. Hair roots are alive, even in a bald scalp and are ready to respond to proper stimulative treatment.

Seventeen years ago Paul A. Thomas discovered the proper method of stimulating the dormant sources of hair growth. His method has been improved each year and today is as near perfect as any scalp treatment can be. First, Thomas treatment overcomes all local scalp infections, stops scalp itch and abnormal hair fall. It then stimulates the tiny glands in the scalp which nourish the hair. Thus, "sleeping hair" obtains sufficient strength to grow again and become visible on the scalp.

Come in today and learn how Thomas can help you to have a good, healthy head of hair. Thomas never makes a charge for consultation or complete scalp examination. All service is rendered in private.

37 Missourians Seek to Enjoin Memorial Fund

File Suit Here to Prevent $30,000,000 Tribute to Thomas Jefferson.

Thirty-seven property owners in St. Louis yesterday sought the aid of the District Supreme Court in their fight to prevent erection of a $30,000,000 Thomas Jefferson memorial in the city. The suit was directed against the Public Works Administration and Arno B. Cammerer, director of the national parks, both of whom were called upon by Justice Oscar R. Luhring to show cause by Friday why they should not be enjoined.

The property owners, all of whom say they own real estate within the area of the proposed memorial, asserted their holdings would be greatly decreased in value if the project goes through. Furthermore, they claimed through Attorney Edmund M. Toland that their business properties would also be affected because of the necessary evacuation of private householders from the vicinity.

In addition, according to the plaint, there is already a Jefferson memorial in the city and a second one would be superfluous. The Government already has allocated $6,750,000 out of the emergency relief appropriation act of 1935 and the City of St. Louis has set aside $2,250,000. The Federal grant was described as being illegal since resettlement housing provisions of the relief act, from which it springs, have been declared unconstitutional and the additional charge was made that the entire proposition constituted an illegal delegation of legislative power.

Toland announced he would seek to prevent final approval of the project by charging the Government would also deprive many men of jobs if the plan went through, the money otherwise being available for emergency works.

Calusa Dies Here in Poverty; Ex-Protege of Queen Marie

Noted Armenian Painter, His Wealth Swept Away by Depression, Lived in One-Room Studio; Friends Raise Money for Burial.

C. Calusd, noted Armenian artist, whose marine paintings once won the attention of Dowager Queen Marie of Rumania and led him to a post in the Court of Notables in Bucharest, died here yesterday in poverty.

Death came to Calused in Casulty Hospital, where he was taken by friends several days ago when a cold he had contracted developed complications. He was 64 years old, and never had forsaken the style of attire wore when he sauntered down the boulevards of Paris and of the Balkan capitals more than 20 years ago.

A native of Constantinople, where he was born in the Armenian quarter, Calusd began to paint as a youngster. His parents helped him as much as they could, and he was graduated from the celebrated Ecole de Beaux-Arts, in the Turkish capital.

As a young man he visited Bulgaria, Yugoslavia and Greese. He exhibited in the galleries of Sofia, Belgrade and Athens, and then went to Paris, where he won acclaim in the pre-war era by his brush.

It was in Rumania that he attracted the eye of Queen Marie, and became a protege of the Monarchy. He returned again to Paris, and came to the United States in 1916 when the World War was sweeping Europe and the art colony of Paris was shaken by guns.

Calusd was properous in this country. He modernized his art, and in 1918 he painted "Our Navy," a patriotic work in oils, depicting the battlefleet of his adopted land guided by Christ. Another work of which he was proud was his "We," an oil of Col. Charles Lindbergh and the Spirit of St. Louis, done shortly after Lindbergh's hop to Paris.

The depression swept away most of Calusd's earnings. He refused help from his friends. At the time of his death he occupied a studio of one-room atop a night club at Seventeenth and K streets. He used to tell the friends who came to have tea with him that from the windows he looked down on the rooftops and thought of Paris of his youth.

Calusd was a familar figure on Washington's streets because he never forsook his frock coat and walking stick. Often his friends asked him why he did not dress more like an American.

Friends yesterday said they had raised money for Calusd's funeral, which will be held at the Deal undertaking establishment at 4 p. m. Thursday, folowed by burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Seven Accused Of Texas Fraud Freed by Jury

After one of the longest trials in the history of the District Supreme Court, seven men yesterday were acquitted of the charge that they conspired to defraud the Government in connection with a Willacy County (Texas) irrigation project.

The jury, given the case Friday afternoon, brought in its verdict after having deliberated some 60 hours.

The defendants, several of whom were millionaires, and others, including nationally known engineers, were: William A. Harding, former member of the Willacy County water board; Frank P. McElwrath, a contractor of Corsicana, Tex.; Perry A. Welty and Charles R. Olberg, formerly associated with the Public Works Administration as engineers; L. C. Hammond, H. W. Cole and James P. Barry, the latter three being connected with California lumber concerns.

The seven were charged with conspiring to change plans and specifications for the Willacy County project so that redwood lumber would be chosen instead of a then-planned open drainage canal. The project was supposed to have cost the Government almost $5,000,000. It never got beyond the blue-print stage.

Attorneys Milton King, George P. Hoover, George D. Horning, jr., and a battery of Texas and California attorneys, contended their clients had merely sought to engage in competition with the "open drainage" firms and had never sought to influence any changes that would not have been beneficial to the canal. Justice F. D. Letts heard the case.

Tax Bill

House provisions." He added, however, that "we will consider any amendment added by the Senate which we believe will improve the bill, because we want the best tax measure possible."

Congress meanwhile, declared itself a week's holiday yesterday, partly in deference to the Republican National Convention in Cleveland, partly to iron out differences between the Senate and House on "must" legislation—namely, the tax bill and the relief bill, but mostly to give Administration's forces a breathing spell for the desperate spurt for adjournment before the Democratic convention in Philadelphia opens on June 22.

While the House adjourned shortly after having named its tax conferees, the Senate pursued a more leisurely course. Majority Leader Robinson sought to bring up and pas a bil lgranting retirement privileges to the employes of the Government-owned Alahka railroad.

Senator McNary, the Republican leader, flatly refused to join in the unonimous consent request. "It was the understanding," he declared, "that there would be no legislative busines today. It is manifestly unfair to bring up bills at this time with so many of the Senators on this side of the aisle at the Cleveland convention."

Despite the pleading of various Senators, McNary blocked consideration of the Panama treaty, the Alaska Railroad bill, and the Wagner-Ellenbogen housing bill.

five hours of negotiation. Representatives will meet again tomorrow.

New strikes broke in Bordeaux, Lille and other provincial cities.

The St. Quentin metal workers, the Jupiter Oil refinery employes and the Longjuneau Tannery men were among those returning.

Employers last night conceded wage increases of from 7 to 15 per cent, recognition of unions and collective bargaining contracts, a 40-hour week and paid vacations under strong pressure from Leon Blum's new people's front government.

Return to work was contingent on negotiation of individual contracts. By mid-week, labor leaders, believed, most of the great army of idle workers would be back. Strikers will not be penalized, the wage increases will be effective as soon as work is resumed, and the "open shop" principle will continue in force.

Leftists hailed the accord as a historic victory for the proletariat, but employers voiced reservations "regarding economic consequences" and the rightist press expressed fear lest the country be harmed by the strain of higher wages and shorter hours. Oppositionists forecast higher prices.

French wages were cut sharply during the former economy regime of Pierre Laval.

Mr. Roscoe Duffer, of New York, will be best man and the ushers will include Mr. David Youngblood, Mr. Wilmott Trew and Mr. Walter Trouland, of Washington.

A wedding breakfast at the Washington Golf and Country Club at 10 o'clock will follow the ceremony. The bride's mother, who will assist in receiving, will wear a chiffon gown with lavender flowers on a white ground, a white hat and corsage of violets.

Many prenuptial parties have been given in honor of the bride, among them a shower at which Mrs. Fed McGhann entertained; a dinner at the Army and Navy Country Club, given by Miss Offutt, a shower at which Miss Sherier was hostess at her home in Alexandria, and a waffle supper given by Mr. and Mrs. Francis Miles Thuney.

The bride was graduated from Georgetown Visitation Convent and George Washington University, where she was a member of Pi Beta Phi Sorority. The bridegroom was graduated from Georgetown University.

The couple will leave for a wedding trip and on their return will reside in Washington. The bride's traveling costume will be a white crepe dress, trimmed in dubonnet, white hat and shoes and dubonnet bag and gloves.

Guests from out-of-town at the wedding will include Maj. and Mrs. H. A. Taylor and daughter, Miss Lillian Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. P. B. McDonnell, Mrs. Charles Waldron and Mr. Edward Radigan, all of New York City.

The Rev. Dr. Browning, pastor, performed the ceremony at 4 o'clock. A reception followed at the residence of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Dr. and Mrs. William Thomas Wright, who are stationed at the United States Marine Hospital, at Wymann Park drive.

Mrs. Elmer C. Doty, sister of the bride and Miss Constance Reese, both of Baltimore, were her attendants, and her nephew, Mr. Herbert Cupid, was the ring bearer. Mr. William L. Beale, of this city, was best man. The ushers were Dr. E. C. Doty, of Baltimore; Mr. Ernest Cory, of College Park, Md.; Mr. William Park and Mr. Edward De Lisio, of Washington.

Following a week's wedding trip the couple will return here to reside.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Men and Women Tilt Lances in Spirited Discussion of Modern Manners and Morals.

Much as I might like to do so, it seems impossible to turn aside from the discussion of modern manners and morals launched last week by "Divorcee," without devoting at least one or more columns to letters which have been received on the subject. Following is a medley of opinions from men and women. M. H.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Having read "Divorcee's" contribution to your column as well as "Anonymous'" embittered retort regarding the age-old controversy as to which is the more heinous of the species, male or female, permit me to enter the fray. Although a man, I must admit "Anonymous" seemingly proved "Divorcee's" contention. Whether that was his purpose I do not know.

* * * *

Naturally, one who boasts of getting "just as drunk as I can get" would be tolerated only by women of uncertain moral standards. He classes "the whole species of working female as either immoral or unmoral," not realizing that this type is confined to his own stratum of society. If he would "find a girl who is decent" let him climb to her exalted position, he would wait until doomsday for her to descend to the depths!

* * * *

And now for a brief defense of my own sex. I take exception to his statement, "I wouldn't be a male if I didn't get a kick out of these amatory episodes." If he is insinuating that men of high moral integrity in Washington belong to the neuter gender he is much mistaken. If he doubts this, I can produce many of them in the flesh at a moment's notice. But of course he would not care to meet them nor would they lok forward with much enthusiasm to fellowship with him. J. E. S.

* * * *

'Decent Men Few.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have just read the letter from "Anonymous." Doesn't he know it is just as hard, perhaps harder, to find a decent man than it is to find a decent woman? It has been for years. In fact, it is the men who have taught the ladies all the things men now object to. Do women learn indecencies from women? No, it is men who constitute themselves their teachers, and quaintly enough, it is the married men who assume the professorial role. But the poor things have such a dull time at home they just have to go out on a spree, thereby spending money they could better have spent on their wives, who would have been fresher and more cheerful as a result when they came home of nights.

* * * *

I certainly do not approve of the way many women conduct themselves these days, but I cannot blame them for having made up their minds to give men just what they have had to take for years. For the last 20 years my husband has spent money on liquor, cars and women. All the men in his office do the same thing . . . A man is horrified and heartbroken if his daughter believes in free love, drinking, etc. But does he feel that way about the daughter of some other man whom he takes out? His own daughter and wife must be virtuous, but little does he care if he ruins the life of some other girl.

* * * *

So, "Anonymous," you and all other men like you are simply reaping the harvest you spent years sowing. Women won't take it any longer. Either they do the same as you do or they get a good job and become independent of all of you. More power to the women!

WIFE.

Speaking of Decency.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As an observer from the sidelines, it appears to me that "Anonymous'" philosophy of life is a bit childish, to say the least . . . What mad demon of conceit possesses the man who supposes he is entitled, after running the gamut of emotionalal indulgence and failing altogether to develop his character along heroic lines, to ask of a girl who blends her life with his that she be decent and fine? Why should he expect that when he does meet a "girl who is decent," she will consider pooling her decency and strength with his vulgarity, his crudeness and his weakness, which yields so easily to the first wind of temptation?

* * * *

If I may make so bold as to mention it, "Anonymous" is certainly not the answer to a decent girl's prayer. A decent girl is naturally looking for a man who has led a decent life. If men like "Anonymous" must have their fun, okay. Their choice is their responsibility. But in the name of justice, let them free their stunted brains of the notion that in some future day they will be rewarded with the love of a girl who is decent, gentle and noble. Sow the wind and you reap a whirlwind, not an oasis of peace . . . Honestly, it gets me, how men of "Anonymous'" type expect a prize package in the form of a wife who will bear their children and cheer their dotage. As Mr. Deeds would say: "It just ain't natural!"

DECENT GIRL.

'Anonymous' Defended.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I write in defense of "Anonymous," who sums the situation in these words: "Men take their women as they find them." No truer words were ever spoken. In the hands of the women of any natioin is the virtue of the men of the nation, and their ideals. Men are possessed of impetuous amatory and exploratory dispositions. Nature has made them so. They are not constructed to resist temptation. It is to women they look for their ideal, for cleanness, for virtue, for that self-control which helps them control themselves, to be the "chevalier sans peur and sans reproche."

Of course "Anonymous" is bitter. Why wouldn't he be? I have seen young men grow bitter and old of soul before my very eyes, flitting from flower to flower of stained and painted modern girlhood. Man wants a sweetheart and what does he get? A soiled, handled, supersophisticated young thing with a dirty tongue and a tobacco-tainted breath, who was in one man's arms yesterday; is in another's today and will be in yet another's tomorrow; who drinks her liquor along with the best. He passes on, seeking the unattainable, wanting (as men have always wanted and always will want) a clean, pure hearted clear-eyed young girl. His bitterness grows as girl after girl yields, without resistance or decent delay, to easy embraces and kisses.

Why should men respect women? There is nothing in modern girls or women to respect. In order to be like men they have sunk below men's level. It is man's preogative to propose; woman's to dispose. Men wish to be good and it is woman's duty to help them to be good, to help them realize the finest in their nature, not drag them down to their animal level. From the bottom of my heart, I pity "Anonymous" and all young men of today. They have been robbed of their birthright: the friendship and love of decent, clean-hearted women and girls. They have been robbed of romance and all it implies. They have been given instead the soiled companionship of females who have all the initiatory technique of women of the streets, some without the courage to go all the way, others who will stop at nothing . . .

* * * *

Personally, I think it is not for men to defend themselves against the accusations of "Divorcee," but for modern womanhood to defend itself against this accusation: You have failed, and dragged down, men of today. When will you wake up and take up again your age-old responsibility of bringing clean gayety and pure love into the difficult lives of men? Only when you do will embittered men learn again to respect womanhood and girlhood. . . . Stop placing the blame for modern moral laxity on the shoulders of men, and put it squarely where it belongs—upon your own shoulders.

MOTHER OF TWO GIRLS.

Women of U.S. Need Guidance In Childbirth

Nation Now Leads All Civilized World in Maternity Deaths.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

The dangers of childbirth have been recognized from time immemorial and one of the early references to a fatal outcome is found in Genesis, in which it is related that Rachel, wife of Jacob, succumbed to the ordeal.

The information routinely published relative to the deaths of mothers as a result of confinement is not flattering. In fact, statistics indicate that in the United States more mothers die following childbirth than in any other civilized country. The figures for 1933 are available and show that 62 mothers lost their lives out of every 10,000 confinements.

No small amount of education is needed, directed chiefly to prospective mothers. In women between the ages of 16 and 44, childbirth is responsible for from 8 to 10 per cent of all deaths. This ratio is exceeded slightly by cancer, by heart disease and by pneumonia, while tuberculosis claims twice as many.

Birth Rate Declining.

Our birth rate has been declining steadily. In 1915 25 babies were born per 1,000 of population; in 1932, 17.4. Careful estimates indicate that 16.6 births per 1,000 are necessary to maintain a stationary population. In Philadelphia, in 1933, the birth rate was 14.8. Some idea of the total reduction may be visualized when we understand that there were 123,000 fewer babies born in 1932 than in 1931.

Complicating the situation is the problem of abortions. Some of these occur spontaneously as a result of bad hygienic conditions, insanitary housing, illness, overwork, etc.; while others are brought about with malice aforethought. One-fourth of all maternal deaths in this country follow abortions, and most of these are due to infections. This tremendous loss of mother life presents one of our greatest social problems.

Guidance Needed.

The most important need today is instruction to prospective mothers relative to the hygiene of pregnancy. In a recent survey it was found that 54 per cent of fatal cases had received no form of guidance during pregnancy—no physician had been consulted and no examinations made. The most striking revelation is the fact that less than 1 per cent of the fatalities took place in women who had received proper pre-natal information.

From the onset of pregnancy every woman should be under the general oversight of a skilled obstetrician. This means that a thorough physical inventory should be taken and the patient advised as to diet, rest, exercise, the care of the bowels and the teeth. Frequent checkups of the blood pressure and of the urine should be made so that the first sign of toxemia, if it appears, is detected promptly. Every pregnant woman can be taught to recognize danger signals. She should be told about high blood pressure and albumin in the urine, and she should be advised to report to her physician immediately upon the appearance of swelling of the face, or extremities, headache, disturbances of vision, or evidence of even the slightest bleeding.

But, you say, how can one secure this ideal type of care? Residents of cities encounter little difficulty. Clinics are available for those who cannot afford a private physician, but a poverty-stricken rural group offers a difficult problem. Plans leading to the establishment of a nursing service in every county of each State must be consummated. Many communities have this type of organization, but it must be sufficiently widespread to safeguard motherhood.

Parents' Effort To Check Ideas Of Youths Fails

Objections Held Foolish; Guiding Is Urged for Modern Tastes.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

IT IS BOTH foolish and wasted effort to try to make one's children conform to past ideals with entire disregard of current fashions. The day of the petty home tyrant who disapproves of modern youth and brings up his children by his own individual standards is gone. Public opinion is against him, and the children know it.

The parent who objects to make-up, one-piece bathing suits, sunback dresses, late hours, is in the minority. If he insists on his principles and succeeds in forcing his children to conform to them, he only ends by cutting the youngsters off from their own kind, or driving them to open rebellion. Every age has its own conventions and make-up can seem no worse to him than did bloomers and bicycles to his grandparents.

If, on the other hand, parents would bend their energies toward acting as balance-wheels for their children, keeping them on the middle track of good taste and moderation, they might be able to effect a compromise. The children will generally come half way if they see that their parents can and will listen to reason.

If make-up must be worn, Mary may be taught to wear it well: Sally may consent to wear a bathing suit of one of the more conservative cuts: Tom may consent to get to bed early on week-day nights, even if during his holidays he turns night into day.

There is nothing really wrong about the present-day customs except when they are carried so far as to be in bad taste or injurious to health. The wise and tactful parent can prevent the undesirable extremes if he keeps the confidence and sympathy of his children. It is easier to guide than to force, but guidance means understanding and adjustment on the part of the parent.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Posed by Nan Gray.

Eyelash Cosmetique Should Be Applied With Brush and Comb So As Not to Smear.

By Mignon.

THERE isn't a complaint that I can find to offer against the new eyelash cosmetique put out by one of the country's foremost manufacturers and beauty parlors' experts. It is an attractive, simple handy little box of black and it has two little white wings on the outside—merely stamped into the box, of course.

Inside is an eyelash brush of wonderfully good bristles that you can count upon not only to last but also not to smear the coloring over your eyelids. Of course the technique in using mascara of any kind must be developed by the individual. I know women who are never without it and yet who never have been known to do a neat job of applying it. The reason for it I don't know, except that it seems to me it must be carelessness.

The tiny brush is in one compartment, the mascara (it comes in a lovely violet shade) is in the third compartment and in between is the tiniest little eyelash comb I ever saw. It has a handle and there is about an inch of comb to run through the lashes after applying the mascara. This separates the lashes and does away with that awful artificial beaded look. It isn't expensive and it lasts what I might call indefinitely.

Petticoats No Help To Spinner of Old

Yarn Wheel Much Easier to Manipulate Now.

Shamrock, Tex. (AP)—Mrs. Edith Carver, 77, spun a spinning wheel from necessity in frontier days.

Recently, during Shamrock's centennial observance, she spun a century-old wheel in public two weeks, reducing the rolls of wool into fine yarn.

"Spinning," she explained, "is easier for me than it used to be. When a young girl I sat on a hard bench all day, and, despite my three petticoats, it became very tiresome."

55 Years at Home.

Denison, Tex. (AP).—Mr. and Mrs. James W. Lankford, who have been married 55 years, have lived no place except in the home to which Lankford took his bride in 1881. The pioneer homestead was built in 1849 from lumber hauled from Jefferson by oxen. It was Lankford's birthplace.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THE BIGGEST THRILL of housekeeping is moving from an apartment to a house. It's something you plan on doing ever so many times, then lose your nerve. But at last you take the step and, of course, you're never sorry! A house is more responsibility, certainly, and you're likely to have all the ups and downs your friends warned you of in connection of heat and repairs and pipes and the like. But it's enough more fun to make up for the trouble, and making a house into home is a grand adventure for a lady and a man who think their family is just swell.

We have some friends who moved out this spring. She had lived in rented apartments so long that she was terribly eager to own her own home and try out something besides ivory for her walls. Something substantial, of course, but distinctive and uncommon. The living room was going to be done over from tip to toe . . . the house was a good deal larger than the apartment, and so she decided to use the old living room furniture to fill in the extra upstairs rooms . . . that would permit her to get everything new for the living room.

She selected Chippendale mahogany furniture because she had always loved it best of all. And a rug in an interesting but practical shade of olive green . . . or rather a carpet laid from baseboard to baseboard. And added scatter rugs in Oriental colors. A carpet was something she'd always longed for in the apartment, but of course it wouldn't have been wise as long as they were renting. She selected this color because she liked the shade and knew it would adapt itself with so very many other ensembles in the future. Now she did something that's quite smart . . . had the walls painted this very identical shade of olive green. Then white woodwork and white mantel, white curtains and white draperies and white picture frames. White leather chair seats for the open arm chairs (the kind of leather upholstery that washes, be sure). And for the sofa and a pair of chairs a fabric with some green and a good deal of cherry red in it. And we assure you—this turned out to be an awfully smart living room.

Latin American Women Interest U. S. Travelers

Visitor Here Describes Customs of Indians in Guatemala.

NOW THAT Americans are beginning to discover America, women of the United States are finding out their sisters in Central and South America are every bit as interesting as European women. Judging from reports of Mrs. Lilly de Jongh Osborne regarding feminine Central America, they are even more so.

But, unlike the traveler who spends but a few weeks in one or two of the five republics and comes back bubbling over with generalizations about the natives, Mrs. Osborne is convinced "only the visitor who hasn't been there long enough to really know Central America ever makes blanket statements about its women. In each republic—in each village, for that matter—customs, beliefs and standards are different."

She explained that she had spent many years studying home life, customs and natives in that part of the world and did not feel she knew all about them, even now. The daughter of a Dutch consul, she was born in Costa Rica, has lived a number of years in Guatemala and San Salvador, has observed the natives at first hand, and has written many accounts of their ways and work.

Describes Indian Life.

Much of her research has related to the Indians of Guatemala. It was of these she talked yesterday at the home of her Washington hostess, Mrs. Ronald E. Fisher, at 2274 Cathedral avenue.

Elaborating on some of the comments in her book, "Guatemala Textiles," Mrs. Osborne mentioned that—in contrast to the woman of the United States, who wants a different dress for every occasion—the Indian woman in Guatemala has only one ensemble at a time, to wear to market, to cook in, and to wear to the fiestas.

"Her wardrobe is not dividend into 'every-day clothes' and 'best clothes' as with us," she said. "The average Indian woman has but one full set of apparel, made according to tribal pattern. Only one is the rule, unless the woman is very wealthy indeed, in which case she may be looked down on as belonging to the 'nouveau riche.' The same thing applies to her husband, if he has more than one outfit at a time. All garments are washed before a fiesta day.

Children are outfitted as small replicas of their parents, according to Mrs. Osborne. "Babies wear caps pulled tightly over their heads and part of their faces. These coverings are beautifully designed and are worn for at least three months to ward off the 'Evil Eye,' and to prevent the baby's ears from standing out too much."

Clothes Vary in Villages.

"Since each Indian village has its own distinctive modes of dress, entirely different from any other, a girl who marries a man from another village must change her style of attire when she moves to her husband's home," said Mrs. Osborne. She pointed out that all Indian women are good weavers because they must prove their efficiency in this before they marry.

"They are also fair seamstresses," she continued, "although dressmaking among the Indians is simple. A few stitches will convert the finished textile (which is beautiful) into a costume. The only style to be followed is the one that has been used for centuries in the village. This, of course, admits no imagination or change of the slightest detail on the part of the wearer."

Just as fashions of dress are the same today as they have been for many, many years, so are fashions in family life, she said. "The latter is still carried on according to the old traditional laws, which provides that older members of the family are to be held in great respect, even reverence," she continued. "Mothers and fathers, grandparents and great-grandparents play an important part in the ceremonies of the village. They are listened to with great respect and their wishes are carried out promptly, without question."

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

"BUT SHE'S SO QUIET, and she hasn't said anything for hours, and she hardly opens her eyes——"

Dr. Pierce patted Brenda's shoulder. "We have to expect that, my dear. She's been through a good deal."

"She seemed better yesterday after she came out of the anesthetic. She talked to me," Brenda tried to look back of the doctor's eyes, into his mind to see what he was thinking. But the eyes were smiling gravely, and she could not see back of them.

"There is naturally some hysteria, some exhilaration on coming out of any anesthetic. We expect that, too. There's nothing to do but to wait, and wait as patiently as we can. Her system has had a great shock."

"How long?"

"I should say there should be a change in the next 12 hours."

Brenda didn't say what she thought. She couldn't say it. A change for the better—or for the worse? The two phrases, the two extremes were juggling around in her mind.

"You'll tell me the truth!" she pleaded.

"You know I will, Brenda. At present there is nothing we can do but watch closely. Lally's temperature is up, naturally. We expect that. Her heart is a little fast, but we expect that, too, and her pulse. There's nothing yet to be worried about—worried badly, I mean. She's reacting as we expected her to react."

"Last time, after the other operation, I mean, she seemed well, she seemed to be a little better the second day."

"That spinal fusion was not the same as this and we always have to remember that this is her only chance, Brenda. Her only chance to walk. And that was what she wanted, wasn't it? She wanted to walk."

Watching Lally.

"She wanted to walk," Brenda repeated after him. That was the only comfort she had had since she had come from Brady's office—saying those four words over and over to herself.

From the hall, Brenda went again into the room where her sister was lying. The nurse was taking her pulse, glancing from Lally's wrist to the watch on her own wrist. When she finished she put Lally's hand back on the white sheet tenderly, and went to the dresser where she made some figures on the hospital chart. Brenda sat down in a chair in the corner and the nurse resumed her position on a chair near Lally's head. Neither of them said anything, and they both watched the still figure on the bed. Dr. Koenig came in a little while, talked to the nurse in low tones, smiled at Brenda, and put a stethoscope to Lally's heart.

His movements, too, were tender and gentle, and tears came into Brenda's eyes when she saw him pull up the sheet over Lally's chest again. She tried to read something in his eyes, too, that would tell her everything was all right, but she could only find the same message she had found in Pierce's—a grave courage. That was all.

Day before yesterday the room so gay with flowers, with Peter's chirping, with Lally's laughter. It didn't seem like a hospital room the day before yesterday, even yesterday. But today, no flowers, no Peter, and Lally's eyes closed, and her laughter gone.

The nurse hardly left the room. If she went she was back in a moment at her old place by the bed, watching. At 3, she was relieved and another nurse watched in the same place. At 5, Dr. Pierce came back, stayed for half an hour watching, too, and when he left at 5:30 Koenig returned, and stood over the bed for a long time. Still their eyes didn't tell Brenda anything, nor their movements. She heard what the nurse said each time to their questions. "No change. No change."

At 8, Val came into the room, but Brenda didn't get up. She sat in the chair and watched him go up to the bed and touch Lally's hand—tenderly.

"I'll wait for you, and take you home," Val whispered as he came over to Brenda on his way out.

"Please, no. I'm staying the night."

With that, he left the room, and Brenda wished the nurse would leave for a minute so she could make Lally know somehow that he had been in, that he had touched her hand. Lally would want to know. The nurse didn't leave, but Brenda went up to the bed anyway. She said nothing aloud to Lally, but as she stood over the golden head, she repeated the words she wanted to say to herself.

"He was here, darling. He was standing right where I'm standing now. He was here, darling——" and it seemed that Lally must have heard those unspoken words because a ghost of a smile passed over her lips and her long eyelashes fluttered.

"Any better?" she asked the nurse when the nurse was taking Lally's pulse again.

The Same.

"The same, Miss Fayre."

At 9, Dr. Koenig came in with a chair from another room and put it near the bed. Brenda suddenly felt stronger with him in the room, and weaker, too. Did he think it was necessary to sit with Lally?

She tiptoed over to the bed and asked him how her sister was.

"No change yet, Miss Brenda, but I am staying here awhile, and my friend, Dr. Pierce will come when I go."

A shot of fear raced through the girl's body.

Four people in the little room: Lally on her bed, the nurse on one side of the bed, Dr. Koenig on the other and Brenda in the corner.

No words from any of them. Only the rather heavy breathing of Lally breaking the silence. Dr. Koenig was motionless, as was the nurse and Brenda, hardly daring to breathe, looking from Lally to Dr. Koenig, and then back to Lally again.

Brenda thought that Lally's breathing was getting more labored as the time passed. Perhaps, it was the silent room that made it seem more labored. That was what she hoped, anyway. She had no idea how long Dr. Koenig had been in the room when he whispered something to the nurse and she left the room. She was back in a minute or so, and then Dr. Koenig left himself, quietly with the same courageous smile for Brenda as he passed her.

"What did he want?" Brenda asked.

"He asked me to call Dr. Pierce."

"The same?" Oh, God, if she would only say there was a change—for the better!

Examination.

But the nurse didn't. She said everything was the same.

The two doctors returned shortly afterward, and Dr. Pierce asked Brenda to leave while they made their examination. She went into the half darkened hall, her heart pounding at her throat. Nothing so awful as the midnight hours in a hospital, nothing so awful as Lally lying so still, so helpless.

At first, she stayed right by the door of Lally's room, but the silence within, punctuated by Lally's fight for breath frightened her, and she walked away down the corridor. A man was standing at the far end by the waiting room. She knew it was Val, but there was no fear in her now that she couldn't face him. There was nothing but terrible thoughts of Lally, her struggle to breathe, her closed eyes. He didn't come near her, and she didn't go to the end of the corridor where he was.

She was waiting for the click on the door of Lally's room, the click that would tell her the doctors were finished with their examination and she could ask them what they had found. It was so long coming, the click, and her body was longing so intensely for it.

It came finally, really only a soft click for the locks in the hospital were well oiled, but to Brenda it was loud as the report of a gun to her waiting body and mind.

Only Dr. Pierce came out of the room, and Brenda, who had thought she would fly to meet him, couldn't move. She stood weakly a few doors up from Lally's room. He came to her, took her arm and led her to the waiting room. There he switched on the light, for the room was in darkness. She felt that Val was following, although she didn't hear him or see him.

Rail Magnate Passes in N. Y.; Mother Was Famous Financier.

By the Associated Press.

Lake Placid, N. Y., June 8.—Col. E. R. Green, son of Hetty Green, famous woman financier, died today at the Lake Placid Club. He was born in London, England, August 22, 1868.

Col. Green came here from Florida several weeks ago. He had been in failing health for some time.

He had been president of the Texas Midland Railroad since 1893, holding a controlling interest in the property. Prior to that time he had served as a director of the Baltimore & Ohio, Southwestern and other railroad corporations.

Was Active in Politics.

Col. Green's death came on the eve of the National Republican Convention, which for years he had attended as a delegate from Texas. He had served as chairman of the Republican State Committee of Texas for three terms.

For the last two weeks administration of oxygen has been necessary, but even this failed to bring a rally from a sinking spell shortly after noon today.

The body will be sent to the Green Eastern estate at Brown Hill, South Dartmouth, Mass. The date for the funeral has not been set, but burial will be at Bellows Falls, Vt.

Started at Bottom.

Under the tutelage of his mother, Col. Green started his railroad career at the bottom of the ladder. His first position was a clerkship in the office of the Connecticut River Railroad. He was graduated from Fordham College in 1888.

With his other business interests, for years he was assistant to his mother in the management of her large real estate and financial interests in New York, Chicago and other cities.

Col. Green was a commissioner and director of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in 1904. He had held the presidency of the Tarpon Club of Texas and other organizations.

Sultan of Sulu, 'Divine' Leader Of Moros, Succumbs on Island

Once Powerful Chieftain Abdicated His Political and Civil Rights in 1915; Was Guest of Taft on 1912 Tour.

By the Associated Press.

Manila, June 8.—Word was received here today of the death of Sultan of Sulu, titular head of Mohammedans of the Sulu Archipelago, last night on the Island of Jolo.

The once powerful Sultan Jamalul Kiram, widely known in the United States, abdicated his political and civil rights in 1915.

James R. Fugate, American governor of Mindanao, recommended that the Sultan's successor, when named by Moro chieftains, be recognized by the government.

The bureau of non-Christian tribes said, however, the Sultan's successor will not be recognized, since it was believed the Sultan's death will mean complete amalgamation of the Moros with the Filipinos.

The Sultan's private property will go to his legitimate heirs, but properties given to him as concessions from the government will revert to the government.

Sultan Kiram was appointed a senator in the Philippine legislative body in 1931, the only Mohammedan royalty to serve as Senator under the American flag.

He was regarded by the Moros as their natural father sent by Allah to make laws for them, to protect and rule over them. He traced his ancestry back to the Prophet Muhammad.

The early life of Sultan Kiram was hidden in mystery. In 1882 Moro chieftains elected a new Sultan, believing him to be in line for the throne. But Kiram's mother came foreward and proclaimed her son the rightful successor. Two other claimants appeared for the throne and war started. But Kiram's forces won and he assumed the royal dignity of Sultan in 1894.

In 1912 the Sultan visited the United States durng a world tour. He visited New York and was a guest of President Taft in Washington.

Sultan Kiram was married at least three times, but he left no children.

Marked Drop In Accidents Is Reported

5 Killed Last Month as Compared With 9 in May a Year Ago.

Reduction Attributed by Van Duzer to Aid of Motorists.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A marked decrease in the number of traffic accidents, injuries and fatalities last month, as compared with May of last year, was reported yesterday by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

Improvement in conditions was attributed by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer to constant observance of the three "E's" in traffic control—enforcement, education and engineering. Washington motorists, he said, are rapidly learning the necessity of co-operation. Better observance of regulations, promoted through recent safety campaigns and "crack down" enforcement methods, has materially aided authorities in their fight to reduce the accident toll, Van Duzer added.

Five persons, four of them pedestrians, were killed last month, as compared with nine for May, 1935. This year, to date, 37 traffic deaths have been recorded. At this time last year, 46 persons had been killed. Of the total fatalities last month, two youngsters, 3 and 6 years old, respectively, were counted among the victims.

Intoxicated Pedestrians.

Police records also show that the other two deaths were caused by intoxicated pedetsrians. The fifth occured when a driver attempted to regain control of his runaway truck on a steep hill.

There were no fatal accidents reported from May 5 to 26, the longest period without a fatality in recent years, according to Van Duzer.

Personal injuries followed the downward death trend and dropped from 411 for May last year to 395 for last month, records revealed. Accidents numbered 874 last month, as compared with 954 the same month in 1935. Property was damaged in 518 cases, as against 583 the year before.

Urges Continued Aid.

Although encouraged by current results, Van Duzer urged motorists not to relax their efforts to aid authorities in street safety promotion.

"This is a step in the right direction," Van Duzer said. "But we have yet a long way to go. The motoring public must continue to support our efforts to control the problem. We are greatly encouraged, but we won't be satisfied until Washington's traffic toll has reached an all-time low."

Van Duzer again cited the need for adequate regulations governing pedestrians. Pointing out that pedestrian deaths are rapidly increasing, he said installation of walk lights along downtown F street has served to educate walkers in the proper methods of crossing streets.

Obeying Signals.

"Publicity attending inauguration of our walk light system apparently has taught the majority of pedestrians not to cross busy intersections against red signals. A recent check at Twelfth and Thirteenth and F streets northwest, showed that a greater percentage of pedestrians are obeying signals than ever before. A few, however, insist upon walking as they please. And these few are the ones ultimately listed on our traffic death lists," said Van Duzer.

Next Sunday, Van Duzer, accompanied by Police Chief Ernest W. Brown, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, highway engineer, and John No-Jan, jr., of the Park and Planning Commission, will leave for Milwaukee, Wis., the "perfect traffic city," to study methods of control.

They will confer with Milwaukee traffic experts and conduct a series of inspection tours.

"We want to see what Milwaukee is doing that we are not," Van Duzer said.

Attorney Freed By Testimony In Speed Case

Character Witness Placed on Stand in Police Court by A. Harding Paul.

A charge of speeding 48 miles an hour against A. Harding Paul, prominent Washington attorney, was dismissed yesterday by Police Court Judge Isaac Hitt, who took the lawyer's personal bond on a charge of failure to sign his permit, after Paul had placed a character witness on the stand.

Testimony of the witness raised a reasonable doubt in his mind as to Paul's guilt, Judge Hitt held. Motorcycle Policeman Mark W. Coleman testified Paul, who resides at Rockwood Parkway, was paced at the 48-mile-an-hour gait on Massachusetts avenue Saturday night.

Just before the hearing, the attorney was seen to enter the judge's chambers. He spent some time in conference there.

Showers Fail To Halt Outing Of Club Group

Monday Evening Party Has Annual Gathering; WPA Units Entertain.

They knew somehow it wouldn't rain all day.

So nearly 150 members of the Monday Evening Club drove out to Jessup Blair Park yesterday afternoon for their annual outing. The sky was stil gray then and a drizzle of rain fell steadily.

They had planned to hold games out of doors and eat a picnic dinner on the wide lawn of the Center.

They did.

It rained for a while but soon the sun shone and the sky cleared.

They took a chance, they explained, and hoped the weather would clear.

Yesterday's outing started with a baseball game between private and Federal social workers. Neither of them won, it seems, because the game was never finished. But some fast ball was played and the participants worked up a keen appetite for a supper which was next on the evening's program.

They ate their supper and were entertained by a WPA theatrical unit with an orchestra and several vaudeville acts. High spots of the show came when one of the troupers, a woman, had a boulder broken as it rested on her stomach.

New officers o fthe organization, which is composed of private and Government social workers and interested laymen, were installed.

They are E. B. Prettyman, former District Corporation Counsel, president; Mrs. Jesse Adkins, vice president; Mrs. Phillip Sidney Smith, second vice president; Morris Klass, treasurer; Edgar M. Gerlach, recording secretary, and Herbert L. Willett, jr., corresponding secretary.

Ray H. Everett, retiring president, was presented with a gavel as a token of appreciation of the club. The presentation was made by Walter S. Ufford, chairman of the club's legislative committee.

Hillcrest Group Votes Against 'Parkometers'

Southeast Business Men Condemn One-Man Trolley Cars.

Opposition to allnonathletic marathons, including dancing and walking endurance contests, was voted last night by the Hillcrest Citizens Association, holding its final meeting of the year in the East Washington Heights Baptist Church.

The group also went on record as opposing parking meters and one-way traffic on Fourth, Eleventh and Sixth streets southeast.

A petition was presented by a number of members opposing conversion of Branch avenue southeast into a major thoroughfare into southern Maryland. Twenty-seven members were against the move to route heavy traffic over the avenue and five for it. A special committee was appointed to study the matter.

A resolution opposing both the proposed purchase by the Capital Transit Co. of second-hand one-man trolleys and one-man trolleys in general was adopted last night by the Southeast Business Mens Association.

On complaint that a traffic signal light at Second street and Maryland avenue northeast was the cause of much traffic congestion, the association authorized its traffic committee to confer with Northeast groups about changing timing of the light.

The association authorized its secretary to ask President Roosevelt to back the recommendations of Senator Elmer Thomas that the Federal lump sum for the District be kept at $5,700,000.

The association voted to held its annual outing July 9.

It voted to request the director of traffic to make Eleventh street two-way from East Capitol street to South Carolina avenue southeast.

The Stanton Park Citizens Association adopted a resolution opposing one-man street cars.

Houses Seek To Gain Pact On D. C. Bill

Conferees Meet Today; Accord Is Sought on Joint Resolution.

Thomas Willing to Slash Lump Sum Provision to $5,000,000.

Senate and House conferees on the District supply bill will meet at 10:30 a. m. today in another move to reach an agreement on the Federal contribution to the District government for the next fiscal year.

While the conference is ostensibly called to take up the joint resolution passed by the Senate on Saturday upon motion of Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, the lump-sum provision is understood to be the only point at issue.

Senator Thomas hopes to reach an understanding with the House managers so that the resolution, which sets up a fiscal relations commission, may be adopted by the House shortly after it reconvenes next week.

Whether the Senate conferees will be forced to accept a slight reduction in the $5,700,000 lump sum recommended by the Budget Bureau is a matter of conjecture. Senator Thomas has expressed a willingness to drop the figure to $5,000,000, but other members of the Senate sub-committee had indicated they would not accept any reduction below the Budget Bureau estimate.

At the last Senate-House parley on the District bill the House managers offered to raise the Federal contribution from the $2,700,000 voted by the House to $4,500,000.

So far the conferees have hardly discussed the two other controversial amendments, the character education appropriation and the ban on outside work by District employes earning $2,400 a year or more.

Senator Thomas has stated, however, that he would be willing to drop the fight for retention of the character education funds rather than lose the bill to a continuing resolution. He also said he would accept, though he disapproved the proposal, the limitation on District employes providing the salary minimum is raised to $5,000.

House conferees have stated on the House floor that they offered to accept the other 84 Senate amendments, including restoration of public health and welfare appropriations to Budget Bureau estimates.

Catholic U. Man Wins Design Prize

John J. Brady, graduate student of Catholic University's architecture department, won the Beaux Arts Institute of Design award in a Nation-wide contest, it was learned yesterday.

He received first prize of $100 and a gold medal for his solution to the problem presented, "A Group Plan for a Small Community in a Large City."

Brady, a native of Brooklyn, was graduated from Manhattan University in 1934 and received a master's degree in Architecture from Catholic University the next year.

John E. Dundin, of Hartford, Conn., also a Catholic University student, was given honorable mention in the contest.

Florists Prepare to Send Gifts to 'Shut-ins.'

Florists in Washington and throughout the United States and Canada prepared yesterday for the fourth annual International Flower Shut-In Day, when philanthrophy will win right of way over business.

For, on Sunday, through the courtesy and altruism of the florists, every deserving person who is classed as a permanent "shut-in" will receive a bouquet.

Already, it was announced yesterday, names and addresses of permanent "shut-ins" are arriving at flower shops everywhere. Clarence J. Shaffer is chairman of the Washington committee.

Deadline for names has been set for tomorrow night. There are 2,300 committees in as many North American cities handling arrangements for the affair.

Recovering From Spotted Fever

Health Officials Warn City Against Tick-Carried Disease

Two Children Stricken With Rocky Mountain Fever in Washington; Warrenton Man Dies; Outlying Sections Here Hold Most Danger.

District Health Department officials yesterday broadcast a warning against the tick-carried Rocky Mountain fever.

One child is now at Children's Hospital recovering from the disease. Another was recently discharged from the hospital as cured.

At the same time it was reported by the Associated Press from Warrenton, Va., that James R. Nash, gentleman farmer and well-known Farquier County resident, had died from spotted fever.

Nash, who was 67, had been ill only six days. He is survived by six children, who make their home in this city.

Westley Wilken, of 4433 Brandywine street, 8 years old, is recovering from the disease and is expected to be discharged from the hospital in the next few days. Four-year-old Virginia Tayman, of Rosaryville, Md., also was in the hospital. She has been discharged as cured.

Warning against dangers of the disease was broadcast by Dr. James G. Cumming, chief of the contagious disease division of the Health Department, with the approval of Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer.

"We are," Dr. Cumming said in a statement, "now entering the season of spotted fever prevalence, which includes May, June, July and August.

"Since 1931 the records of the Health Department show 39 reported cases and 13 deaths, a third of the cases were fatal.

"Owing to the serious consequences of the disease, both adults and children should be on their guard against tick bites. In order for the tick to infect a person it must feed on one's blood for about eight hours. After the tick becomes attached it requires a period of hours of feeding on the human being before the virus in the tick becomes activated so that the person bitten may become infected.

"The early removal of ticks is then most important. If one should visit a tick infested area the insects should be removed from both the clothing and the body. If children are exposed to ticks their clothing and body should be gone over carefully at least once each day and all insects destroyed. Do not permit the ticks to become engorged, remove them while still flat.

"In certain sparsely built up sections in the District ticks are prevalent and may infect one with Rocky Mountain spotted fever We know that this is so because five of our cases who had not been out of the city were infected by tick bites."

Survey Begins On Local Road Needs in '36-'37

Survey of the improvement and replacement needs of the District highway system in the next fiscal year was begun yesterday under orders of Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner.

Capt. Herbert C. Whitehurst, director of highways, launched the inquiry which is to be carried on by Maj. F. McKenzie Davison, superintendent of maintenance.

At the same time the Commissioners sent letters to various citizens', civic, business and other organizations in which an invitation was extended to submit their recommendations for new roadways as well as other suggestions for highway improvement.

What the total of suggested improvements will be no District official would assume to forecast. Roadway improvements are handled under appropriations from several different funds, with the major part from the gasoline tax.

Hearing will be given later to advocates of any road improvement proposal, Col. Sultan said. Views then expressed will be incorporated, if approved by the Commissioners, in the annual District estimates for the next fiscal year.

Gas Station Robbed Of $24 by Gunman

Paul Ednel, of 609 North Carolina avenue southwest, manager of a filling station at Wisconsin avenue and Q street northwest, was robbed of $24 early yesterday by a lone gunman.

He told police the man entered the station, brandishing a revolver. He then was forced into a washroom. The bandit took the money from the cash register and escaped.

V. C. Griffin To Command Air Station

Will Assume Duties at Anacostia on June 24, Navy Announces.

Graduate of Academy Has Long Record in Aviation Service.

Commander Virgil C. Griffin, a pioneer Navy flier and now attached to the Army War College here, will assume his duties as the new commanding officer of the Naval Air Station at Anacostia on June 24, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

A graduate of the Naval Academy in 1912, Commander Griffin was the forty-first naval aviator to be trained at the naval air station at Pensacola, Fla. He was a member of the first aeronautical department sent to European waters in May, 1917.

While overseas he was graduated from the French naval aviation school at San Rafael and from the great Yarmouth royal naval air station in England. He was on duty at the headquarters of naval aviation in Paris from August, 1917, to January, 1918, later commanding the American air station at St. Trojan, France. For his service at that station he was awarded a special letter of commendation by the Navy Department.

Following a short tour with the board of inspection and survey and a command of the ship plane division of the Atlantic fleet, in September, 1921, he assumed command of the aviation detachment of the U. S. S. Langley, the Navy's first aircraft carrier.

From 1922 until 1924 he was superintendent in charge of training at the naval air station at Pensacola. Subsequent assignments were: In charge of the air department of the U. S. S. Lexington; commander of the scouting wing of the air squadron of the battle fleet; navinaval air station, and a student at gating officer of the Pearl Harbor the Naval War College.

Shake-Up

Maj. Brown to Shift Police to Aid Clubs' Drive.

A shake-up loomed in police circles yesterday.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, heartened by the fact that the drive for funds for the Boys Club of the Police Department has raised $59,518 of the $75,000 goal, pointed with pride to Capt. James Bobo's Second Precinct, which is leading the field with a total of $6,368.

"I contemplate assigning the leaders at the Second Precinct, together with those of others in second and third places, to other precincts in a bit of strategy to aid in effectively closing the drive during its last week," the major said.

Larger subscriptions reported yesterday came from Galliher & Huguely, Inc., the Yale Laundry and E. J. Ross Council, O. U. A. M.

Scott to Talk on Housing.

Representative Byron M. Scott, author of the national housing bill, will speak tomorrow at 8 p. m. on housing needs at the Friends Meeting House, 2111 Florida avenue northwest.

New Films Are Summarized by Preview Judge

Shirley Temple Heads List Parkyakarkus Is Signed; Hollywood Notes.

Hollywood, June 8.—Picketing the preview parade:

"POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL," (Twentieth Century-Fox). Best o the week. Shirley Temple, seven-year-old, No. 1 box office star, gives her admirers an hour's worth of typical Temple routine.

Picture sets no precedents and burns no rivers, but does show fans what they lay in on the line to see—Shirley singing, dancing and "cute-cracking" in every foot of film.

In this story, little like the stage play or silent picture, Temple plays the daughter of a soap manufacturer, (Michael Whalen) lost en route to school, picked up by a radio team, (Jack Haley and Alice Fay), and put to work in a program sponsored by papa's deadly rival.

It all ends in a merger of soapsters, and marriage of Whalen and Gloria Stuart, rival's advertising counsel, after a featherweight romance.

Temple has two good solo numbers, "Oh, My Goodness," and "When I'm With You," and teams in "You've Gotta Eat Your Spinach," and "But Definitely," all written by Mack Gordon and Harry Revel.

Good bits for Claude Cillingwater, Jane Darwell, Sara Haden and Henry Armetta. Irving Cummings directed.

"THE WHITE ANGEL" (Warner Bros). Drama of Florence Nightingale, the English girl who gave the world the "Red Cross nurse," carries enough tear-wringing emotionalism to survive a mixture of good and bad handling.

Raven-haired Kay Francis in the title role gives a better performance than script warrants. Scenarists have made a "teacher's pet" of Florence, who models all the Victorian virtues.

Moviemen have injected a crusading war correspondent (Ian Hunter), into the picture to create a highly improbably love motive in the life of a lady who congenitally had no love motive.

Best shots: Miss Francis crouched beside a soldier's grave at dawn, and sitting through a blizzard before a Crimean hospital, waiting for orders barring her from the place to be countermanded. The diretcor, Willitm Dieterle.

"THE ROAD TO GLORY" (20th Century-Fox). A celluloid anachronism, this inexpensive indoor battle piece is a glorification of war such as the movies used to turn out in the 1920s.

Film is cheaply produced, but well well cast, with Fredric March, Warner Baxter and Lionel Barrymore in the top spots. The hauntingly beautiful June Lang turns in an admirable performance as the only woman in the film.

Economy of production was possible largely through use of battle scenes lifted from a French-made picture, Hollywood principals being "processed" into the action through use of transparencies. The entire film was made indoors.

That "Grick" Is in Again!

Parkyakarkus, Greek dialect stooge for Eddie Cantor, is back in Hollywood, hipped as usual on maintaining the civic pride of a thousand cities.

The synthetic Hellene (nee Harry Einstein in Boston) is set to do some picture chores for President Sam Briskin and RKO-Radio. They signed him up under the nose of Samuel Goldwyn, who holds Cantor's contract. The minute he arrived parkyakarkus hustled out to the RKO lot and parked his carcass on Briskin's desk.

"What have I been doing?" he replied to a question. "I've been telling newspapermen what a swell town Hollywood is. Not that it ain't. It's the best in the world, except when I'm in New York or Chicago or some place."

"You like 'em all pretty well, don't you?"

"Sure I like 'em. In vaudeville and radio I've traveled everywhere. You got to like 'em.

"Detroit? A great town. Atlanta? Wonderful. St. Louis? The swellest you ever saw. Seattle? Denver? Dallas? Say, you can't go wrong on places like that. San Francisco? Mmmmm, a sweetheart! And Cleveland? How I love Cleveland.

"How about Addis Ababa?" inquired the cynic-who-is-always-present.

"Adis Ababa? Wonderful! Magnificent! Terrific!"

"Whaddaya mean? You've never been in Ethiopia."

"Sure, I haven't," said parkyakarkus aggrievedly, "but could Mussolini be wrong?"

Their Needles Click.

Kay Francis and Frieda Inescort, working in "I Gave My Heart," are rounding the quarter pole in a knitting race, and hard cash is being wagered on the outcome. The gals began knitting men's sweaters the day the picture started, and the entire cast has taken sides.

Inescort says her's is for her husband, Ben Ray Remond. Francis won't tell, but it is suspected Delmar Daves, screen writer to whom she is reported engaged, is the lucky fellow. Current odds: Eight to five on Francis.

A smal, shabby man carrying a large, sleepy-looking owl startled the "Son Comes Home" troupe by approaching Mary Boland, pointing a finger at her and accusing: "You've got mice!"

"I haven't got mice," defended Boland.

"You've got mice," repeated the little man firmly, "and that's because you haven't got an owl. Now this old owl will catch as many mice as a dozen cats. I'll sell him cheap."

"But I've got a dozen cats," persisted Boland (she has, too), "and I don't have mice."

"Well," said the salesman as a studio policeman led him toward the gate, "buy the owl anyway, and I'll throw in a few mice."

Associated Power Output.

New York, June 8.—For the week ended May 30, Associated Gas & Electric System reports net electric output of 73,905,367 units, which is an increase of 15.6 per cent. The variation in the holiday periods between this year with Memorial Day falling on Saturday and last year, when it came on Thursday, thus reducing output for a full day, accounts in part for the size of this increase, which is the greatest in [illegible] than two years.

About The Showshops

THOSE fortunate followers of the footlights and the flickers who find it possible to make transcontinental touring also a part of their pleasurable pastiming during the so-called heated, or vacation, term will be glad to learn that drama will be provided under unusual auspices at both ends of the country these next few months. In other words, the season of the "midsummer drama festival" is at hand.

BELL.

Two of the foremost of these annual thespic celebrations are those on the campus of Union College at Schenectady, N. Y., and in the Pasadena Playhouse, 39 S. El Molino avenue, Pasadena, Calif. The latter, this year, is first to launch its midsummer drama festival, which is scheduled to occupy the attention of Southern Californians and visitors from all points of the compass from June 15 to August 1. The Mohawk Drama Festival, at Schenectady, will get under way on July 21 and continue to August 29.

The plays to be presented in the Eastern festival embrace Shakespeare's "Macbeth," Sheridan's "The Rivals," George Ade's "The County Chairman," recently revived by the Players Club in New York; the George C. Hazelton and Benrimo play of "The Yellow Jacket," Edgar Lee Masters' "Moroni" and Moliere's "The Imaginary Invalid". Music and dance spectacles are a customary concomitant of the Mohawk Festival.

The Pasadena Playhouse, one of the most famous laboratory theaters in the country, having devoted itself last year to the Chronicle plays of Shakespeare, this season will dedicate its efforts to a series of his Greco-Roman works, including "Troilus and Cressida", "Timon of Athens", "Pericles, Prince of Tyre", "Coriolanus", "Julius Caesar", "Antony and Cleopatra" and "Cymbeline".

So, if you are motoring, railroading or flying in one direction or the other, there they are—and well worth any drama-lover's attention, time and money.

Another manifestation of the summertime amusement season comes in the form of an announcement of preliminary plans for the fourth of the "Going Native" local revues, staged annually in August at Loew's Fox Theater, under the directorial guidance of Manager Gene Ford, formerly production manager at the Capitol Theater on Broadway. Mr. Ford's first concern this year is to hear as soon as may be from young writers and composers who feel that they can originate creditable material for the revue in the shape of playlets, skits or blackouts and suitable songs. These contributions may be serious or humorous as the Muse, if any, prompts, but all must be original, clever and entertaining. For the best skit, a flat prize of $50 is offered, plus a reasonable royalty for its use on the stage during the engagement of "Going Native". Entries must be received by Mr. Ford, at Loew's Fox Theater, not later than midnight, July 15.

There is plenty of entertainment on the four spacious decks of the steamer, with the attractions at Marshall Hall Park added . . . Sammy Lewis and Patti Moore, the pseudo-Washingtonian dance team that recently played the Capital after six months in England, are laying off this week in New York, play next week in Chicago, spend a week in Los Angeles after that and then sail for 22 consecutive weeks' bookings in Australia and South Africa . . . Dancing their way around the world, as you might say.

The Gossipel Truth.

Hollywood, June 8.

Katherine Hepburn and Radio Pictures are quietly battling . . . Mae West is considering buying a large section of property near Malibu Lake and building a race track . . . Twentieth Century-Fox is working on a story to star Shirley Temple and the Dionne quintuplets in the same flicker . . . Paramount has made Louis B. Mayer a tempting offer to leave Metro and take complete charge of Paramount. They are working on the deal now . . . Garbo must start work on her flicker, "Camille," for her salary starts on that day, and, according to her contract, if it isn't completed by a certain date, Miss Garbo receives $10,000 for every week after that date . . . Charlie Lederer, while residing at Alexander Woollcott's house, decided to phone Woollcott long distance. Lederer also told Woollcott to reverse the charges.

John O'Hara and Clifford Odets will be in the latter's flicker, "The General Died at Dawn." O'Hara plays the role of an English newspaperman, and line hurled at him is: "You can buy him for a bag of salt." Odets will be merely an extra . . . Gertrude Michael and Bill Faralla, an assistant director, are romancing . . . When Einstein visited Charlie Chaplin, Charlie spoke to him about the Einstein theory. Chaplin spent hours explaining the Einstein theory to Einstein. The next day Chaplin received an autographed photograph from Einstein and on it was written: "To Charlie Chaplin, the scientist, from Einstein, the actor."

The movie stars are more temperamental about their radio plays than their screen plays . . . Marlene Dietrich and Clark Gable both made demands for script changes almost to the time of broadcasting "The Legionnaire and the Lady." The original title was "Morocco." Frank Shields sold an article on the American Davis Cup team to Liberty, believing our boys would win, and now the article can't be used . . . Frances Drake and Howard Hughes, who weren't going to see each other, finally managed to leave their other romances and make a date . . .

Joel Sayre is in Mexico writing a book in the manner of his "Rackety Rax," but this one will do with professional football . . . John Giegud, the great English actor, will definitely make his American debut next season on Broadway in "Hamlet."

The Federal Diary

By Betty Read.

The matter of automatic promotion for Federal employes is one of importance to the thousands in the District and throughout the country.

Dr. William H. Deck, head of personnel in the Coast and Geodetic Survey, has long followed every move in Congress along this line and charted every bit of impetus gained either through legislation or through efforts of employes, and feels that automatic advancement may become a reality in the near future, judging by the favorable reports made by the House Committee on Immigration on a bill to provide salary benefits in the Department of Labor.

Dr. Deck has contributed the following article on the situation.

"Efficiency ratings at present are nothing but a waste of time; they are made simply to comply with legislation requiring them. Although the Congress should provide adequate appropriations for giving promotions on account of efficiency, there would be a limit to these promotions because of the "average" clause in the legislation, which puts employes on a see-saw which must be balanced. If one employe moves farther out on the board on one side of the balance pole, another employe must move farther out on the opposite side to maintain the see-saw in level position.

Based on Good Intentions.

"Twelve years of existence of the classification act have indicated that it was built on good intentions. Congress has not provided additional money with which to pay for increases, to which efficiency ratings were set up as a means of determining eligibility for promotion. Accordingly, automatic promotions are about the only answer to rewarding merit in the Federal service, and it is hoped that the Congress will act favorably on the pending bill, which will enhance the dignity and capacity of the service.

"The matter of automatic advance is not a question of additional expense, but rather it is a matter of sound investment, the committee is reported to have said, and added: 'The committee is impressed with the view that such an investment—reducing labor turnover and raising the standards of employes—is in fact an economy.'"

New Rules to Hit 52,000.

Fifty-two thousand Federal employes, 12,000 of whom are working in Washington, will be affected by a new manual of regulations to be issued shortly by the Department of Agriculture.

For the first time in many years, the department is co-ordinating its rules and regulations for working conditions, administrative orders and other rules that govern the conduct of the department heads and the employes.

Of late years every new order was printed and sent to each bureau or division to be included in a loose-leaf manual of department regulations, but this has recently been considered a rather hit-and-miss affair. There are a number of new regulations which were felt necessary for a more efficient department and these are in addition to the recent regulations imposed by Congressional action dealing with hours of duty, sick leave and so forth. The manual will be ready around June 15 and will go into effect with the beginning of the fiscal year, July 1.

New Graduation Idea.

A new idea in college commencement addresses which are flourishing the length and breadth of the country these days, will be tried out by John W. Studerbaker, United States Commissioner of Education, tonight at the graduation exercises at the University of North Carolint.

Rather than deliver a lengthy address himself, the commissioner has arranged to lead a discussion in which five graduating students will participate on "Where Do We Commence?" It's a new idea, anyway, and the commissioner is strong for informal discussions even in his own department among the employes under him.

Picnic Days are Here!

Picnic days are here, all right. Members of the "Fetracom," social organization of the Federal Trade Commission officials and employes, are having a get-together at the farm of Henry C. Lank, a member of the commission's legal staff, tomorrow afternoon at 5. Several of the commissioners and other officials will be there to join in the tug-of-war, toast hot dogs, and drink the picnic coffee.

Then the Department of Agriculture is having itself a field day on June 21 at Beltsville, the National Agricultural Research Center, at which over 1,000 employes of the department and friends have said they would attend. Besides all the usual picnic activities there will be a tour of the projects of the center and of nearby Tugwelltown, the model housing project.

"Now Is the Time for All Good Men * * *."

Political activity is a proclivity
That is barred by regulations
But there's one party that's hale and hearty
That clerks join with salutations.

'Tis a woman's party; it's chic and smarty
Whatever it's platform may be;
No campaign cigars—just visiting bazaars,
Where candy and kisses are free!

You just vote a straight ticket, right up to the wicket,
Or bolt with your own candidate;
Campaign with soft voice for one of your choice—
Say, ain't a woman's party great?

Dancing Star Fashions New Steps

Eleanore Whitney, the diminutive dance star, whose latest portrait study appears above, already has been nominated as a threat to the screen pre-eminence of Eleanor Powell by virtue of the rhytnmic skill of her work in earlier Paramount pictures. In the making of "Three Cheers for Love," however, she fairly surpassed herself. Although the picture was considered completed, it was reopened and filming resumed so that Eleanore might add additional routines to her "swing-tap" number. You have to be pretty good for a studio to go to all that trouble and expense!

Riley Must Face Kidnaping Charge

Jerry Riley, mild-mannered cigar store proprietor, who operated an etsablishment within the shadows of Police Headquarters, will have to return to Michigan to stand trial o na charge of kidnaping, the United States Court of Appeals decided yesterday.

Described as a member of a Detroit gang credited with half a dozen abductions in Michigan, Riley was arrested here several months ago when an anonymous tip was received by police. He fought extradition but lost in the District Supreme Court and then waged a losing battle in the Appellate Court.

Riley was charged with having participated in the kidnaping of Charles Mattler in 1928. According to Ray Andrews, another member o fthe gang, Riley also patricipated in another case that ended in the slaying of the victim.

Andrews, now serving from 20 to 40 years for his part in the Mattler case, was brought here from the Michigan State Penitentiary to testify. Fear that he would be killed by members of the gang led to elaborate precautions to protect him. Unless the Appellate Court rescinds its order, Riley will be taken back to Michigan before the end of the month.

700 Are Hurt As Stand Falls At Carol Fete

3,000 Persons in Danger; Rumanian King Aids in Rescue Work.

By the United Press.

Bucharest, June 8.—More than 700 persons were injured and an unknown number killed today when a grandstand loaded with 3,000 spectators collapsed during a review honoring the sixth anniversary of King Carol's restoration.

The King, other members of royalty and visiting dignitaries, including President Edouard Benes of Czechoslovakia, witnessed the review, but were not in the grandstand.

Amid screams of the dying and injured, King Carol and his brother, Prince Nicholas, and young Crown Prince Michael, led the rescue work.

King Carol, in full military uniform, and Prince Nicholas, wearing a naval uniform, jumped from the royal reviewing stand and raced to the scene, nearly a quarter of a mile away. The King, with remarkable coolness and authority, calmed the panic-stricken.

Queen Mother Watches.

The Queen Mother and the entire diplomatic corps were among the horrified spectators.

The government issued a communique stating that only three persons were killed, but informed sources said the death toll was at least 24, and it was feared that it would mount as many of the injured were in critical condition.

Approximately 400 injured were removed to hospitals. Many others were treated at first-aid stations.

An eyewitness to the tragedy said:

"We heard ominous creaking in the grandstand, which is built in tiers about 65 feet high. A few minutes later there was a noise like a thunderclap.

"The next moment the stand was a pile of debris with a struggling mass of men, women and children fighting frantically to free themselves from the wreckage. The bodies were heaped high.

Crowds Fight Wildly.

"The groaning and screaming of the injured and dying was sickening. Everybody fought wildly to get out of the debris. It looked like most of the injured were women and children."

Private automobiles were commandered to carry the injured to hospitals. Red Cross ambulance facilities were not adequate. King Carol supervised direction of emergency measures. All diplomats turned over their official automobiles for ambulance work.

A nearby army barracks was converted into a field hospital.

White Leads In Shawnee Tourney

Bags Five Birdies, Takes Lead From Doser With 140 Card.

Mackenzie Is Tied for Fifth With Total Score of 145.

By the Associated Press.

Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., June 8.—Dropping five birdies on this picturesque course today, Orville White, of Chicago, led a fast-stepping field at the close of the second round in the $3,000, 72-hole Shawnee Open golf tournament.

White sank five putts from 15 feet in posting his 71—69—140 to forge two strokes ahead of Clarence Doser, of Rochester, N. Y., who had a 71—71—142.

Tony Manero, National Open champion, finished back in the field with a 78—74—152. The strain of his brilliant play last week still was perceptible on the greens, but his driving was back in shape, as he whittled 4 points from his Sunday score.

Thirteen in the field were better than 150.

Byron Nelson, of Ridgewood, N. J., was in third place with a 72—71—143, while Ralph Guildhal, of St. Louis, was fourth with a 75—69—144.

MacKenzie Fifth.

Felix Serafin, of Scranton, Pa., who posted the best score of the day, a 68, and Roland Mackenzie, of Washington, D. C., who led at the end of the first round, tied for fifth with 145.

Doser, former New York State Open champion, was never more than 1 over par and collected four birdies by dropping his chip shots dead at the third, eighth, tenth and seventeenth holes. Nelson got three birdies in shooting his 71, 1 under par.

Serafin scored six birdies in shooting his masterful 4-under-par 68. They came mostly on chip shots that dropped by the pin and on several long putts.

The Scranton golfer suffered, however, because of his 77 yesterday.

Gene Kunes, of Norristown, Pa., the Canadian Open champion, was off his game, posting an 80, 6 more than his 74 of yesterday, to finish with a 154.

Bobby Cruickshank, of Richmond, and Ed Dudley, of Philadelphia, fared poorly and finished in the 150s with only an outside chance of winning the final tomorrow.

A Word of Advice From Champ

Whatever Champion Jimmy Braddock whispered apparently was agreeable to Max Schmeling, who smiles broadly at his Napanoch, N. Y., training camp, where he is preparing for the Joe Louis fight on June 18.

Mrs. Hill Leads; Didrikson Cards 82

Medalist Shatters Links Record by 4 Strokes in Western Open.

Topeka, Kans., June 8 (AP).—Stroking brilliantly over the wind whipped Topeka Country Club course to a sparkling 71, six strokes under women's par, Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, defending champion, won medal honors in the eighth annual Women's Western Open golf tournament today.

Mrs. Hill's remarkable round was only one stroke over men's par, and shattered the women's course record by four strokes.

The only professional entrant, Mildred Babe Didrikson, of Beaumont, Tex., came in with a pair of 41s after playing most of the way around in the rough. So remarkable were her recovery shots that she was on practically every green in regulation figures, but her putting touch was missing.

Scores of other highly rated players included: Miss Jane Cothran, Greenville, S. C., 78; Miss Dorothy Traung, San Francisco, 83; Mrs. Charles Newbold, Wichita, 82; Miss Edna Saenger, Shreveport, La., 83; Mrs. Leon Sullivan, Memphis, 81; Miss Kathryn Hemphill, Columbia, S. C., 80; Miss Phyllis Buchanan, Denver, 80; Miss Beatrice Barrett, Minneapolis, 80, and Miss Dorothy Custafson, South Bend, Ind., 84.

Derringer, of Reds, Defeats Giants, 7-3

Cincinnati, June 8 (AP).—The New York Giants suffered their fourth setback in seven Western games today when the Cincinnati Reds came through with a 7-to-3 victory behind the steady hurling of Paul Derringer. The defeat dropped the Giants three and one-half games back of the idle Cardinals.

With the Giants leading, 1-0, the Reds blasted Gumbert off the mound with a three-run attack in the fifth.

Brevity, Lame, Retired for Season

Widener Star Limps After Finishing in Ruck in Belmont Stakes.

New York, June 8 (AP).—Joseph E. Widener's Brevity probably has run his last race of the year.

Pete Coyne, trainer of the colt, announced today that Brevity had pulled up lame after finishing fifth in the Belmont Stakes Saturday. While the injury may not be serious, Coyne said it probably would keep him from fulfilling his future stake engagements.

Brevity is the second of the leading 3-year-olds to retire to the sidelines. Bold Venture, winner of the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness, bowed a tendon while preparing for the Belmont Stakes and will not race again this season.

The Widener star won the Florida Derby, but has run in a disappointing fashion since, finishing second in the Kentucky Derby and the Withers Mile. In the Belmont, he was 12 lengths back of Granville, the winner.

No Odds, No Races, Says Paris Crowd

Paris, June 8 (AP).—Thousands of spectators at the St. Louis race course blocked the track today, preventing the horses from running, because officials refused to post odds.

The course was without pari-mutuels because of a strike of employes.

After spectators had swarmed over the track for several minutes the officials agreed to post odds and the crowd returned to the grandstand.

Pirates Win in Ninth On Error, Bases Full

Pittsburgh, June 8 (AP).—Cy Blanton went the route for the first time this year today, outpointing Ed Brandt in a pitching duel as the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the Brooklyn Dodgers, 2 to 1, scoring the deciding run in the ninth when Linus Frey fumbled Arky Vaughan's grounder with the bases loaded. Vaughan went hitless for the first time in 20 successive games.

Detroit Splits Double Bill With Sox

Boston Wins First, 6-3; Grove Chalks Up Ninth Victory.

Tigers Take Finale, 12-7, With 6 Runs in Sixth Inning.

Boston, June 8 (AP).—Bob (Lefty) Grove gained his ninth victory of the season by a 6-3 margin before 23,500 fans today and the Red Sox then collapsed behind Fritz Ostermueller and tossed the second half of the double-header to the Tigers, 12-7.

Grove had the better of Tommy Bridges in a well-played game which became Boston's property when Manager Joe Cronin drove a homer over the leftfield wall scoring Jimmy Foxx and Ossie Melillo. Foxx lashed out his fourteenth circuit drive with none on in the sixth.

Elden Auker reversed matters for the Tigers in the second game, dspite the five errors made by his mates, two of which were charged against Charley Gehringer. Auker held the Sox hitless for four innings but gave eight for seven runs during the last five frames.

Clinch Decision.

The Tigers scored three runs in the fourth and had a 3-1 lead when they clinched the game with a six-run rally in the sixth, when Ostermueller was belted out of the box. After the Tigers scored twice in that inning, Ostermueller forced in another run by passing Auker and then saw Bill Rogell clear the crowded sacks with a lusty double.

The Tigers connected seven times against Ostermueller, got another off Jack Wilson and made four hits against Joe Cascarella during the last two innings.

DiMaggio Hero In Yankees' 12-3 Win

Rookie's Homer, Triple and Single Drive in 5 in Rout of Browns.

New York, June 8 (AP).—With Joe DiMaggio and Lou Gehrig showing the way, the New York Yankees came out of their batting slump today as they piled up 16 hits, good for 28 bases, to defeat the St. Louis Browns, 12 to 3.

After going hitless 12 times, DiMaggio poled out a homer, triple and a single to drive in five runs, while Gehrig sent in three with his eleventh circuit drive of the season, a double and a single. Each Yankee made at least one hit with the exception of Frank Crosetti.

Pat Malone got credit for the victory, his fourth of the season, although he was relieved by Johnny Broaca after loading the bases in the sixth.

Powell's Post Given Reynolds As Nats, Indians Start Series

Carl Reynolds, impressing Manager Bucky Harris with his hitting in recent games, will be at center field for the Nats today when the delayed series with the Cleveland Indians opens.

Harris' decision to play Reynolds in centerfield follows Harris' displeasure at the recent play of Jake Powell, who on Sunday was slow in running out a pop fly, which almost resulted in a double play.

Displacing Powell in the fourth inning, Reynolds slammed out a single, double and triple to lead the Nats' attack and Harris is content to permit him to remain in the regular line-up.

The Nats, with their pitching ragged, welcomed the respite offered by yesterday's rain. The postponed game will be played as part of a double-header on the Indians' next trip to Griffith Stadium.

Harris will send Pete Appleton to the mound today. He will be opposed by Johnny Allen or the left-handed Thornton Lee.

Montanez Downs Klick; Lewis Wins

New York, June 8 (U.P.).—Blood-spattered Pedro Montanez, of Puerto Rico, tonight weathered a badly gashed left brow as he pounded his way to his sixteenth consecutive American victory—an easy 10-round decision over Frankie Klick, veteran San Francisco lightweight before 15,000.

More blood was added to the brawl in the tenth when Montanez opened a slight gash on Frankie's left brow with a grazing right hook.

In the third and fourth rounds when Frankie took his two trips to the canvas, it seemed that the Far Westerner must suffer the first full count in his long career. But Pedro was unable to put him away.

Both floorings resulted from short right hooks to the chin.

Buddy Lewis will return to third base today for the series opener. The torn finger nail suffered by the third base rookie on Sunday when he caught a throw from Cliff Bolton has healed sufficiently to permit him to return to the line-up.

Thus Cecil Travis, who was scheduled to replace Lewis at third base, will go back to his right field duties. Travis will play the outfield for the Nats against all types of pitching, but Stone and Hill will alternate in leftfield. Stone will get the assignment against right-hand pitching.

New York, June 8 (U.P.).—John Henry Lewis, light-heavyweight champion from Phoenix, Ariz., tonight outpointed John Anderson, of Sweden, in a fast 10-round nontitle bout at Dexter Park.

Three times—in the fifth, sixth and seventh rounds—Lewis had his opponent on the verge of collapse, but couldn't deliver the knockout blow.

D. C. Man One of Two Winning $892.80 Charles Town Double

Uncle Mitch, Gay Bride Winners

D. A. O'Connor, and 1 Other Cash in on Dark Horses.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town Race Track, June 8.—What began as a rainy afternoon for a Washington and a Virginia man turned out to be payday in a big way for that pair. For some reason and most probably no reason, D. A. O'Connor, of 24 Bryant street, Washington, and George W. Suttles, of Middleburg, Va., paid $2 each for pieces of paste board on which were printed the numbers 8 and 7. Less than an hour later, they returned to collect $892.80 on the daily double. They, alone, collected.

The majority of the others among the 3,000 present donated to swell the prices awarded Messrs. O'Connor and Suttles.

After Uncle Mitch won the first race the daily double possibilities ranged from $99.20 on the combination ending in Miss Fern to $1,785.60 on the Brown Vixen team, on which only one ticket was sold. Trixie Lass was in a class by herself. She did not draw a buyer with Uncle Mitch.

The day's feature race was the Shepherdstown, 6½-furlong struggle won by Idle Worker, a $4.80 favorite. He had a length and a half margin over Wittekind with Larry M, a well-defeated third in the field of five.

The race, like the others on the card, was run over a sloppy track. However, the weather cleared during the afternoon and the jockeys and assistant starters were the only persons uncomfortable.

Timber Phantom from the Bond stable, won in the role of a $4.20 favorite in the first race. The Tall Timber filly, in charge of Sammy Palumbo, had some trouble shaking off Monocacy and then drew clear in the stretch. Monocacy took second money with Canopia, covered with mud, third in the field of seven.

Uncle Mitch an outsider which threatened to wreck the starting gates and who was started from outside the stalls, circled his field to be rated behind the pace of Bromide to the stretch turn and then went to the front to win going away by half a length. Uncle Mitch paid a $28.20 mutuel. Third money went to Scotty's Pride.

The third race brought a chorus of boos from the crowd when Gay Bride was given the decision over Miss Fern, the favorite. From where I sat, directly behind the line, it looked as if the judges had done a good job. However, Jockey J. Feltner did not ride properly. Perhaps it was because his face was full of mud, but he seemed to wait too long to make his move. Miss Fern was much the best and would have won in another jump.

Gay Bride was overlooked in the wagering and paid a $46.80 mutuel.

Justa Flight, the favorite, accounted for the fourth race, the Washington Times Purse, under a good ride by J. Hernandez. Ada Wan did most of the pace setting, but could not cope with the Flying Ebony gelding in the stretch. She salvaged second money ahead of Mintie.

Visa proved Jockey Paul Palumbo's second winner of the day and she awarded the faithful with a $5.80 mutuel. The final went to Miss Catalan at $7.80.

CANOPIA closed some ground in the last stages. SEA SAGA tired in the stretch after going forwardly. THUNDERLEE closed a gap from a slow beginning. Two-dollar mutuels paid—UNCLE MITCH, $28.20, $10.40, $4.00; BROMIDE, $3.60, $2.60; SCOTTYS PRIDE, $3.00.

UNCLE MITCH, much the best, started from outside the gates, went wide at first turn, was eased along on the outside of BROMIDE and took command when turned loose in the stretch to win going away. BROMIDE was hustled to the front at once, set the pace and continued gamely, but could not resist the winner. SCOTTYS PRIDE, slow to settle into stride, gained sharply while swinging into the stretch, but faltered in the late stages. REDIVIVUS closed full of run from a slow beginning. VANVOLA went forwardly for a half. FOUL TIP was through early. CANYNGE and DOLENTE could not reach contention at any stage.

THIRD RACE—About 5 furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:40. Winner, J. D. Brown's ch. f. (3). Canter—Julie. Trained by J. Hill. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:06.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GAY BRIDE, $46.80, $12.80, $6.80; MISS FERN, $3.20, $3.00; TRIXIE LASS, $15.40.

GAY BRIDE wrested the lead from TRIXIE LASS in midbackstretch, saved ground under a punishing ride and just lasted to stave off the closing rush of MISS FERN. The latter, off in a tangle, moved to the pace setter with a rush going into the far turn, was steadied to the straightaway and then came with a burst of speed and would have been the winner in another stride. TRIXIE LASS went forwardly all the way, but faltered in the stretch. CANTIDE saved ground entering the stretch, but failed to threaten. MUDDY DAY had early speed. DOLLY TOUR was miserably ridden.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $892.80.

FOURTH RACE—About 5 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:14. Off at 4:14. Winner, Mrs. M. R. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUSTA FLIGHT, $4.00, $2.40, $2.20; ADA WAN, $2.80, $2.40; MINTIE, $2.80.

JUSTA FLIGHT, off slowly, came through on the inside of ADA WAN, swinging for the stretch, to take command and was opening a gap at the end. ADA WAN, first away, ran CHANNING into defeat and continued gamely when displaced. MINTIE came with good speed in the final stages after being outrun. CHANNING was through early. TOPSIE H. was never a factor.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:40. Off at 4:43½. Winner, Mrs. J. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—IDLE WORKER, $4.80, $2.80, $2.40; WITTEKIND, $4.20, $3.20; LARRY M., $3.20.

IDLE WORKER sprinted into the lead at once, was steadied along while saving ground and easily held WITTEKIND safe. The latter was closest to the pace throughout, but could not threaten despite a good ride. LARRY M. went evenly, but was no match for the top two. FLOSILDA, forced wide at the first turn, failed to rally threatening. LUCID trailed all the way.

SIXTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:12. Off at 5:14. Winner, C. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—VISA, $5.80, $3.40, $2.80; BIG TONEY, $5.00, $4.40; MISS SYMPHONY, $8.00.

VISA, within striking distance of the leaders from the start, was sent up on the outside of BIG TONEY at the far turn, took command under hard riding and was drawing clear at the end. BIG TONEY ran TRAPLOU into defeat after the quarter and continued willingly, but was unable to resist the winner. MISS SYMPHONY went evenly. TRAPLOU got to the front going into the first turn, but faltered and was not persevered with in the final sixteenth. HARMOAK was listlessly ridden.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:41. Off at 5:41½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS CATALIN, $7.80, $3.40, $2.80; EGEON, $2.80, $2.60; FOGGY DAWN, $2.80.

MISS CATALAN, close to the pace throughout, circled EGEON and BARNEY SEXTON a the far turn to take command, and drew clear entering the stretch. EGEON raced BARNEY SEXTON into defeat, but tired slowly in the last sixteenths. FOGGY DAWN, badly outrun for three-quarters, finished gamely. BARNEY SEXTON quit after going forwardly. Dear Al:

Sammy Palumbo, little Italian-American rider, is the Earl Sande and the Tod Sloane of this track and he comes by his honors justly. He is a riding piece of machinery these days. Time was when he was regarded as a Don Meade. But not now. Palumbo is riding them all alike and all good. There is a rumor that Palumbo didn't mesh so well with the officials here. In fact, the very fact that he showed up to ride brought a frown to many faces. It is said that Palumbo was given a license with the understanding that he was going to be set down for the meeting the first time he made a false move. His only moves have been from out of the fields to give his little blonde wife, always in the stands, a chance to yell, "Come on you, Sammy." Right now Sammy is the best bet the track has. He is drawing much money into the mutuel machines. His presence on a horse sends the odds down several points. Palumbo is not a youngster. He rode the last winner at Pimlico the day that Victorian, with Sonny Workman up, nosed out Toro, and that wasn't yesterday.

BILL.

First race—Scotch Age will appreciate the going and could surprise in this sort of company. Hogarty's last was good and he is due respect. Counsellor Billy will like the going and could be a keen contender.

Second race—Jimmy D. a bang-up second last out, will have a track that will suit. He is fit now and ready to score over this kind. June G. is getting good and is dangerous. Little Hurd, still a maiden, is improving and may make a money appearance.

Third race—Roque Pine came through on the rail with a rush last out in better company and then faltered. Could be a keen factor here. Banana, third last out, for the place. Truthfully is a sharp maiden.

Fourth race—Clear Knight gets the call here. He will be at home in the going and has the early speed necessary at this short route. Red Riot and Petee Lad are possibilities.

Fifth race—Red Label has been working well and I'm going to string along. Scotty Don and Jobakheta appear to be the ones to beat. beat.

Sixth race—Donee was blocked along the rail last out. Meets a field here that seems to suit his purposes and I'm going to give him a chance. Gagne and Parade On for the rest.

Seventh race—Monedy, tightened by that last, should take care of this field. Pukka Heaven and Lady Glasgow for the place and show.

Best bet—Jimmy D.

4-Mile Trial For Navy's Oarsmen

Middies' Crew to Work Route in Final Prep for Poughkeepsie

Annapolis, Md., June 8 (AP).—The Naval Academy varsity crew will get one time trial over a 4-mile course on the Severn River before leaving to participate in the Poughkeepsie regatta.

Coach Charles S. Walsh is working his crew over the longer course in an effort to increase the endurance and stamina of the oarsmen who have demonstrated their ability in the sprints. He said he expected to have the time trial before the crews leave Saturday for the navy camp on the Hudson River. The varsity crew is slated for three time trials over the Poughkeepsie course before the race.

The Navy senior boat has come a long way since it lost to Columbia by a length in the opening race of the season. The timing and blade work is considered good.

Keeping his boatings unchanged Walsh, since the intercollegiate season ended, has been devoting his time to prepping his sprint champions for the longer grind. On Thursday the crews—varsity, jayvee and freshmen—will row 4 miles up the Severn River, picnic on the shore and row back to the boathouse.

Charles Minter, No. 4 in the junior varsity boat has a strained back muscle. His seat has been taken, temporarily, by F. W. Brown, a plebe oarsman last year. Walsh expects Minter to be in his seat for the big race.

G.P.O. Golfer Sets Pace First Day

Lynch, Treasury, Trails by Stroke; 95 Play at Beaver Dam.

By Dave Herman.

W. L. Lawrence, of Government Printing Office, claimed the spotlight in the opening day's play in the Inter-departmental golf championship yesterday at Beaver Dam Country Club.

Lawrence covered the soggy and lengthy Beaver Dam course in 80 and 77 for a 36-hole total of 157, which put him out front by a one-stroke margin in the battle for the medal prize.

The G. P. O. golfer paced a field of 95, but at least 100 additional Government linksmen will be in action today, Lawrence's slim lead may not stand up by the time Johnny Miller and Bill Harvey, of Treasury, and Tommy Bones, Paul Carey and Gene Pittman, of Treasury Procurement, get through with Old Man Par.

Lawrence Has 145 Net.

Lawrence, 13 over par, also has a low net of 145, which is tops in Class A.

Jack Lynch, of Treasury, trailed Lawrence by a stroke with 78-80—158. Capt. D. E. Stace, War Department, present Army and Navy Country Club champion, made a good afternoon comeback for a 77 after shooting an 82 in the morning. His 159 topped Hickman Greene, of Public Works Administration, and Tom Belshe, of War Department, by one shot. Greene scored 18-79 and Belshe 82-78.

C. C. Heath, of Patent Office, took an 85 after tying for the morning lead with a 78. W. A. Flanery, of Interior, went sky high in the nightcap journey for a 91 after having a 79 to his credit.

C. R. Culligan, of Treasury, seemed to have a headlock on the major prize in Class B. He scored 85-83—168-30—138.

Treasury, defending Mellon Cup champions, are expected to retain the trophy, provided Johnny Miller, Bill Harvey and R. O'Malley turn in good scores today. Treasury's biggest opposition will come from Treasury Procurement and War Department.

Lawrence's card and results follow:

Heavy Rivals Weigh In for Tonight's Battle

Marty Gallagher, the pride of Foggy Bottom, looks dubiously at the scales which register 210¾ as he records his tonnage for his bout against Bob Tow, of Alexandria, which was postponed until tonight. Tow, the other gentleman in elegant white panties, doesn't seem at all worried as he looks on.

Peewee League Ready for Big Year

13 Teams to Compete in Columbia League as Joe Cohen Presides.

The Columbian Athletic League, operated by Joe Cohen, the city's youngest sandlot league president, is all set for a banner season in the Peewee Division. A total of 13 fast teams have joined the loop which will open June 20 and continue into August with games on Tuesdays and Thursdays. The championship team wins a Washington Post Sandlot Association trophy and 15 gold baseballs from the league.

The teams comprising the league are Smith's Pharmacy Senators, Columbia Radio, Buchanan's Tigers, Capital Transit Peewees, All-Service Radio, Petworth All-Stars, Glover Park Peewees, Buck Newsom Peewees, Michigan Park Orioles, the Senators, Merrick Boys Club, Roosevelt Trojans and the Columbians, 1935 champions.

It was decided at a recent meeting that the managers will pick the All-Star team to play another All-Star team in Griffith Stadium. Players of all teams must not be 15 before November and must submit their photographs to their managers before the opening date.

In addition to the trophy and the gold baseball awards to the champions, 15 league emblems will be awarded to the runner-up team. The player hitting the most homeruns will receive one gold ball as will also the players selected by the managers as the most valuable man of the season. The manager whose team scores the most runs will receive a silver baseball.

A meeting of the Columbian Midget league was held last night and the Columbian Insect League will meet tonight at 8 p. m. at 611 Kiefer place northwest.

Lopez-Sonnenberg Open Mat Season

Vincent Lopez—the one who plays on the ivory domes of his opponents, not the one who plays on the ivories of a piano keyboard—will return to the Capital next Thursday night in a rasslin' match with Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg.

Lopez created a sensation as well as several minor riots—in his debut here last week against George Koverly. Sonnenberg is undoubtedly the most formidable opponent Lopez has encountered in the East.

Just in case dynamite Gus might decide to outsmart his charge, Strangler Lewis, five times world champion who lost seven times to Sonnenberg while at his peak, will be on hand to second Lopez in the encounter.

Four all-star numbers have been arranged to support the Lopez-Sonnenberg brawl. Joe Cox, the Kansas City star, will wage war with youthful Dick Powell, while in other 30-minute events Hank arber will tackle Al Billings, Ralph Garibaldi will growl at Cliff Olsen and Isidore Goldstein will attempt mayhem upon the hapless person of Charley Strack.

Dizzy Dean, With 11 Victories, Keeping Cards in League Lead

St. Louis, June 8 (AP).—Take Dizzy Dean from the St. Louis Cardinals line-up and what would you have?

Probably a second division outfit, chorus the fans, without meaning any disrespect toward the abilities of Frankie Frisch, Pepper Martin, Joe Medwick and others of the well balanced ball club which leads the National League.

For the records show that Dizzy has won 11 of the club's 31 victories this season. He has been defeated only twice.

With only a day's rest he defeated the second-place Giants twice in three days last week-end to provide the necessary margin to keep the Cards in front. Of the four games in the series the Giants won two. If the elder of the Dean pitching brothers hadn't won a pair, the Giants would have been atop the standings today.

And going again to the records:

Dean has won seven consecutive games.

He has not been defeated since May 12.

He has more victories than any other two pitchers on the staff.

Manager Frisch didn't ask Dean to pitch twice in the series. Dean asked for the assignment. And after the Giants won a double header Saturday, following Dean's victory in the opener Friday, Frisch decided to take him up.

A year ago Dean had won 6 and lost 4.

Japan Hurler Beats Yale in No-Hit Feat

New Haven, Conn., June 8 (AP).—Wakahara pitched for the Waseda University baseball team, of Japan, to a no-hit, no-run victory over Yale today. The score was 6-0.

Completely baffling the Elis, Wakahara struck out 12 men, walked only 2 and allowed no Yale batsman to get beyond second. No more than four men faced him in a single inning.

Private Agencies Win In Softball Game, 25-6

The Capital's social and welfare workers enacted their second annual softball game yesterday between the Public welfare agencies and the Private agencies, with the Privates avenging last year's defeat by a 25-6 margin. The teams were formed from the Monday Evening Club and played at Jessup-Blair Park.

Several well known public figures took part, including Elwood Street, Director of Public Welfare; Sanford Bates, Director of Public Prisons; Harry Hite, of the Community Center, and Hubert L. Willett, Director of the Community Chest. Bates was one of the pitchers whom the Public Workers pounded freely.

Cummings Tops Meyer In Indianapolis Race

Indianapolis, June 8 (AP).—Wild Bill Cummings, the man who was left at the post in the 500-mile automobile race here May 30, today beat out eight other famous speed kings in a seven-lap race at the 2½-mile track put on for delegates to the convention of the Mystic Order of Veiled Prophets of the Enchanted Realm.

Cummings, who failed to even get started when the 500-mile race was run, passed Deacon Litz, of Dubois, Pa., on the last lap of a seven-lap event this afternoon and finished in first place at a speed of 114.069 miles an hour.

Louis Meyer, of Huntington Park, Calif., winner of the 500-mile classic, wound up in their place behind Cummings and Litz.

'Specs' Seen as Aid To Racing Hounds

Norwick, England, June 7 (U.P.). Racing greyhounds could follow the hare more quickly and "Fido" would dodge traffic better if fitted with spectacles, K. Keemble Williams, optician, said today after extensive experiments with canines.

The average dog's eyesight is only one-sixth of normal human vision, Williams said, adding that dogs generally are far-sighted.

Many dogs, he said, fail to see a stationary rabbit. It is only when the rabbit starts running that they spot it.

Tow-Gallagher Fight Is Due For Tonight

Rivals Rained Out After Weigh-in; Gallagher, 210, Up 15 Pounds.

By Bill McCormick.

The feud of the Potomac between Marty Gallagher and Bob Tow was washed out by the tears of Jupe Pluve yesterday. The 15-round local heavyweight natural will be held at Griffith Stadium tonight.

The advance sale already has reached $2,500 cash, with many reservations yet to be claimed. The weatherman has promised "fair and warmer" for today, presaging a gross gate that will set a record for a bout not involving a nationally-ranked fighter.

At the official weighing-in yesterday, Gallagher surprised by recording a tonnage of 210¾ pounds, 15½ pounds more than his antagonist, who scaled in at 195¼.

Those familiar with conditioning were surprised that Marty scaled so high, but admitted they had been misled by his obviously perfect fighting form. They conceded that he probably gains 4 or 5 pounds each year in the natural course of events and would be unable to scale 206 or 207—heretofore his best fighting poundage—in the future.

That Gallagher was in perfect form was indicated by his nervousness and tenseness during the official testing of tonnages. He was obviously as much on edge as ever was Jack Dempsey, one of the most restless individuals known to the ring.

Tow, on the other hand, was as cool and phlegmatic as Joe Louis during the weighing-in. Those who feared he might have been trained just a trifle too fine for the encounter were elated at the postponement. They pointed out that the day's rest, which will not be broken up by any formal weighing-in ceremonies or other routine, will enable their man to gain many pounds and become stronger than he would have been last night.

Betting odds, which had been for the most part even, shifted slightly in favor of Tow with the postponement. There still was plenty of Gallagher money in sight, but it usually was being held until $6 would be laid on the Alexandria Adonis to every five wagered on Marty.

One local wagerer placed the sum of $1,000 in the hands of a commissioner yesterday afternoon, with intructions that it be bet on Gallagher at the best odds obtainable. It is being rapidly gobbled up.

Tom O'Donnell, the local restaurateur, offered Robert May, comanager of Tow, any amount he wished to wager that Gallagher would win. To date, May has not put any chips on the line, but it is generally expected that he will meet O'Donnell's offer with an impressive sum.

The preliminary card will carry over intact. In a six-round semifinal, Cary Wright will meet Lou Raymond. In six-round preliminaries, Joe Green will swap swats with Al Sharp and Stanford Carrier will engage Al Parks.

George Cox will box Mickey Finn and Jim Lamar will face Joe McDougall in four-rounders.

Mrs. Meckley Defends Title in Competition at Suburban Club.

At least a dozen Washington women golfers, led by Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, the defending titleholder, will compete today at Suburban Country Club, Baltimore, in the 18-hole qualifying round of the Maryland State Women's Championship.

Fresh from her victory over Helen Dettweiler, of Congressional, in the District championship, Mrs. Meckley will step to the tee as the favorite to retain her title.

Miss Dettweiler, 1934 Maryland champion, also is entered as is Mrs. Jack Scott, of Kenwood, who was runner-up to Mrs. Meckley last season.

Other Washington women participating are Mrs. L. G. Pray and Mrs. J. T. Powell, of Manor; Mrs. Leo Walper and Mrs. Fred N. Trewitt, of Kenwood, and Mrs. G. S. Goeztman, of Congressional.

Led by Mrs. David Clark, who scored an 80, and Mrs. Charlotte S. Stern, who shot an 81, Army and Navy Country Club women defeated a team from Richmond yesterday, 9½ to 2½, at the service course.

Mrs. Clark, playnig with Mrs. F. G. Crisp, defeated Mrs. Tom Priddy and Miss Lillian Wood, 2½ to ½, while Mrs. Stern and Mrs. Woodward, with a best ball of 78, won 3 points from Mrs. W. R. Graham and Mrs. Wilson Brand.

Mrs. T. J. Johnson, scoring an 86, and Mrs. F. L. Whitaker, took 3 points from Mrs. C. B Walden and Miss Marian Sydnor, and Mrs. T. A. Balthis and Mrs. Hudson Bailey, of Richmond, captured 2 points from Mrs. C. B. McNabb and Mrs. W. R. Slaughter.

A return match will be played in Richmond September 1.

Washington's topnotch golfers will turn their attention to the Middle Atlantic championship, which starts Thursday at the Five Farms course of Baltimore Country Club. Morton McCarthy, of Norfolk, Va., is defending champion.

Due to the fact that he is in the Bahamas on Government duty, Roger Peacock, District champion, may not return in time to play. Hickman Greene, Levi Yoder, Harry Pitt and Billy Dettweiler are among the local stars who have designs on the title.

The Rock Creek Open championship will be played June 22, 23, 24 at the Rock Creek course, Ed Burns, manager, annouced yesterday. The Rock Creek Open, inaugurated last season, is open to any municipal or club golfer. Volney Burnett was the 1935 winner.

Mrs. B. C. Hartig yesterday scored a 41, 40—81, two strokes shy of the course mark held by Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd. Mrs. J. W. Cramer, Ben Hartig, jr., and Dick Meyers were in the foursome.

Lomski, winner of two preliminary battles here and heading a card for the first time in his return to the wars, stopped Wiater in the third round of a bout scheduled to have gone ten.

Lomski weighed 186½ and Wiater 191.

Fleming Foreword To BankingManual

New York, June 8.—A book entitled "Present-Day Bnking," the work by 84 leading bankers and authorities in the financial field, has just been published by Banking, journal of the American Bankers Association. The material in this 500-page voulme was taken from the regional conferences held the past year by the association in its Nation-wide program of banking development under the leadership of Robert V. Fleming, president of the association.

"In my opinion," writes Mr. Fleming in the foreword, "this book presents conclusive evdence of the earnest and effective endeavor which the banking profession is making in these changing times to maintain the business of banking on the highest level of public service. I commend the contents of this volume to the earnest attention of the bankers of the United States, not only as a landmark in banking thought, but as a practical text in banking operations. It presents, in practical working form, what I think we may fairly say is the very latest and best banking thought on both the current and long-distance problems confronting the banking business."

Lumber Trade Asks Safeguard In Soviet Pact

Says U. S. Is Giving Part of Domestic Market to Russia and Canada.

The one-year agreement between Russia and the United States, following recognition of the Soviet government by the Government of the United States, expires on July 13. Article 3 of that agreement provides that negotiations for its extension shall begin not later than June 13. Representations regarding the extension are now being made to the State Department. The National Lumber Manufacturers Association issued a statement yesterday which said:

"One of the American interests most likely to be affected adversely by possible terms of the renewed agreement is lumber. Soviet authorities have stated in the past that if the European market for lumber should decline they will seek export outlets elsewhere, particularly in the United States. Present imports of Russian lumber are comparatively small, being almost entirely confined to softwood lumber. But the Russian government is known to be trying to force American importers to handle largely increased quantities of Russian lumber. In 1935 imports of lumber from Russia were 32,980,000 feet, as compared with 13,023,000 feet in 1934 and a maximum of 70,767,000 feet in 1930.

U. S. Policy.

"The most-favored-nation policy of the United States has operated to open the American market to Russian lumber on better terms than for Canadian lumber, because in the Canadian agreement a quota was placed on British Columbia fir and hemlock. At the same time Eastern Cadanian pine and spruce are entering the United States in rapidly increasing quantities.

"Thus, the United States, although normally a large exporter, is giving up a part of its domestic market to Canada and also to Russia, the two largest lumber producers in the world outside of the United States, but as yet has no extension of its possible lumber markets in the British Empire. Canadian lumber shipments to the United Kingdom have more than quintupled since 1931, whereas the shipments of softwood lumber from the United States to the United Kingdom have declined about 30 per cent.

"The National Lumber Manufacturers Association, acting for the American lumber exporters, has made representations to the Government that under the circumstances there should be 'a reasonable safeguard against substantial occupation by Russian lumber of American domestic markets.'"

Wheeling Road Pays $35 Back Dividends

Cleveland, June 8 (AP).—Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad has paid accumulated cash dividends of $35 a share on its prior lien stock, as of June 4, company officials said today.

Most of the Wheeling & Lake Erie prior lien stock is held by the Nickel Plate Railroad, which has deposited the stock with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as collateral for loans. Payment of the back dividends gives the Nickel Plate nearly $5,000,000.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Adjustment of French labor problems sent European gold bloc currencies soaring against the dollar in most foreign exchange markets yesterday.

The pound sterling dropped sharply both in New York and London on brisk short covering following announcement by Premier Blum that the French franc would not be devalued.

In New York the pound declined 1⅞ cents to $4.99¾. French francs rose .01⅛ of a cent to 6.59¾ cents. Swiss francs gained .11 of a cent at 32.41 cents and Holland guilders gained .10 of a cent at 67.68 cents.

The dollar moved up 1¾ cents in the London market to close at 4.99⅞ to the pound. In Paris the American unit was lower, closing at 15.16 francs (equivalent to 6.596 cents to the franc) compared with the overnight New York rate.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Regain Most of Last Week's Losses; Bonds Firm; Wheat Rallies; Francs Rise.

Stocks responded to slightly more attention and closed with gains of a point or two for the leaders in a market that held to a monotonously level line. Bonds were dull and firm. September wheat closed an eighth of a cent lower at 84¾ cents a bushel.

Firmer prices at the opening of stock trading encouraged speculation slightly and the volume rose on the day to around three-quarters of a million shares. Gains in most departments were fairly modest, but industrial stocks managed to regain last week's losses. Railroad shares were higher. Steels and farm stocks led the market, in spite of a small setback in some grains.

Steel's rise at the best amounted to more than 2 points, against a decline of 1⅞ points last week. Bethlehem recovered more than half last week's decline. Republic and National were strong. Chemical shares, which often follow the steels, were buoyant. They rose 1 to 4 points, Allied leading.

Mail orders and farm implements, scenting the bonus more acutely, climbed 1 to 4 points and more. Case jumped nearly 5 points. Sears, Roebuck and Montgomery Ward sold near their peak levels. Metal shares did fairly well, especially the silvers. Cerro de Pasco, the feature of a week's trading, gained a little more.

Some of the food stocks were firmer. Motors improved slightly. General Motors and Chrysler met with little selling pressure, as was the case with most stocks, but neither did any determined speculative buying. Utilities were firm. American Telephone acted well on higher earnings estimates. Rail equipments moved higher. Favorable gossip was heard on rubber share earnings, but the market improved only fractionally.

Wall Street sentiment toward the stock market has moved up several pegs in the past two weeks. Brokers now report little desire to sell among their clients and say they sense a buying movement once the political conventions are out of the way and Congress has adjourned.

French New Deal.

Diversion offered by the Republican convention was rather thin, and markets took more real interest in the stabilizing, for the time being, of the French position. The usual lip service given by the new French ministry that no franc devaluation was under contemplation seemed to have some effect on steadying the nerves of speculators, but in reality nothing more than a short breathing spell seems to have been promised.

At the same time that he proclaimed undying loyalty to the franc and the gold standard, the new French premier announced a program which will make impossible any help for the franc. The French aims seem to bear a great similarity to those of our own New Deal, which had (and maybe still has) currency depreciation as a goal, to say nothing of a necessary accompaniment of increased government expenditures, political control of the central banking system (to facilitate financial hocus-pocus), and a general policy of redistribution of wealth.

Shorter Hours.

The French scheme for shortening hours of labor, increasing government expenditures for relief and subsidies, price lifting, public works, farm aid, and so on, is bound to carry a sharp devaluation of the currency, bring inflation, and worse France's competitive power in foreign markets, through higher costs. At the worst it may help toward an all round currency depreciation race, but that is not believed likely. At best it can hasten stabilization of the leading currencies by agreement and an eventual return to gold. It can only be hoped that action which France may take will not prove to be a deflationary influence on this country.

The new week begins with favorable trade news. The steel industry, estimates the American Iron & Steel Institute, will increase its operating rate to 69.5 per cent of capacity, from 68.2 per cent a week ago. The steel mills are now operating at a higher rate than a month ago, something unusual for the trade. A year ago the operating rate was only 39 per cent of capacity. Motor car business is falling, but railroad ordering is rising and miscellaneous demand continues good. No great case can be made out for servere business depression so long as the steel industry is able to operate at summer's beginning at better than two-thirds of capacity.

Bank of France.

The new governor of the Bank of France is supposed to be sympathetic to Leftist proposals to "reform" the position of the bank which has a board of 15 regents consisting of 6 industrialists, 6 private bankers and 3 appointees of the treasury, including the governor and 2 deputy governors. Control over the bank is held by about 200 of the 41,000 stockholders and France's "new deal" group now in control would remove or recentralize such great power as is now concentrated in the board of regents. Comparatively little seems to be known in financial circles here about the new Bank of France governor, but there is respect for his ability. What his policies will be has not yet been made clear. Since, as others in the Blum government, he favors public works spending, an end to deflation and some "reflation," whatever that may be, foreign exchange men here expect the Bank of France to liberalize discounts, expand credit and cheapen money, all which measures would not be helpful to the franc or to maintenance of the present gold standard.

General Motors.

April turns out to have been the best month for General Motors, but sales of cars in May, shown on a report issued at noon today, was only about 3 per cent under the record breaking sales of the previous month. Sales were about 75 per cent larger than for May of last year. The automotive industry has amply proved to be groundless the fears of many who thought that the change in date for new model production and the intensified sales campaign of last autumn would have to be paid for this spring. All that has been uncovered is that more people have wished to buy and been able to buy automobiles than has been the case since the depression began. Motor prosperity has meant much for the revival of other industries.

Money and Reserve.

The consensus among lending officers of local banks is that the Federal Reserve Board actually is going to take its first step to cut down excess reserves by raising reserve requirements this summer. Most observers predict action around August 1, which would be about midway between Government financing dates. Action now is said to be held up mainly by the needs of the Treasury. If the board does raise reserve requirements by, say, 25 per cent, opinions agree, there will be no perceptible diminution in the supply of money available for lending; but the attitude of the average bank, with some of its excess funds chopped off, will change to the extent of half a per cent or more in the rate it will charge for its loans.

U. S. Income Up 3.7% in April, 12.9% in Year

Increase Due to Larger Production Rather Than Prices.

New York, June 8.—The national income of the United States produced in April showed an extension of the rise which began in March after a four-month recession. The national income in April amounted to $4,734,000,000, as compared with $4,565,000,000 in March, an increase of 3.7 per cent, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. As compared with the corresponding month last year when the income was $4,194,000,000, there was an increase in April this year of 12.9 per cent. For the first four months, the national income this year amounted to $18,449,000,000, as compared with $16,450,000,000 last year, an increase of 12.2 per cent.

The price level in April was only slightly higher than in March and it was lower than in April of last year. The increase in the national income consequently resulted in a higher output and more active business. The total output of all products in April was 3.5 per cent higher than in March and 13.4 per cent higher than in the corresponding month of last year. For the first four months the price level was less than 1 per cent higher than a year ago. Consequently, nearly all the increase in the national income was reflected in a gain in business activity. The output of all products during the first four months was 11.2 per cent higher than a year ago.

As compared with the first four months of 1933, when production for such a period was at the low for the depression, the output in 1936 showed an increase of 24.8 per cent. As compared with the first four months of the predepression year of 1929, however, the output in 1936 was 16.9 per cent smaller. In other words, the output in the first four months of 1936 represented the recovery of 49.2 per cent of the ground lost in the depression. This recovery in output was due to the fact that the advance in prices from the low for the depression was less rapid than the gain in the national income. Prices in 1936, relative to the national income, were much higher, however, than in 1929. This explains why production in 1936 still fell considerably short of the full recovery level.

Jurymen Find Cissel Accounts In Good Order

Eight Witnesses Are Heard; No Indictments Returned in Montgomery.

A Montgomery County grand jury yesterday investigated accounts of funds in the care of Capt. Joseph C. Cissel, when he was counsel for the county commissioners, and found them in good order.

The grand jury heard testimony in 11 other cases, which also were ignored. At the end of the day the jurors reported to Judge Charles W. Woodward it had no indictments to return and adjourned.

The commissioners had forwarded State's Attorney James H. Pugh an audit of the Wisconsin avenue widening project made by the county accountant, Alexander Hancok, and two certified checks totaling $17,789.75 presented to the commissioners by Capt. Cissel.

In presenting the checks, Cissel wrote the commissioners his files concerning the amounts had been mislaid and he could not tell whether the money had been paid out on the project. He paid the checks with the understanding they would be returned if he found his files and could show he should be reimbursed.

Eight witnesses were called before the grand jury in connection with the hearing. They were County Accountant Alexander Hancock, County Commisioner Robert D. Hagner, County Treasurer J. Forest Walker, Ira C. Whitacre, clerk to the county commissioners; former County Commissioners Lacy Shaw and John B. Diamond; Wilson Stewart, recently discharged as an employe of Hancock, and Fred Lee Lutes, an official of the Silver Spring National Bank.

Belgian King Asks Van Zeeland's Aid

Brussels, June 8 (AP).—King Leopold turned again for a government tonight to his former Coalition premier, Paul van Zeeland.

Van Zeeland, who resigned after chamber elections had thrown a plurality of chamber seats to the Socialists and many others to a new "house cleaning" party called the Rexists, was asked to form a cabinet following the failure of Emil Vandervelde, veteran Socialist leader.

Vandervelde's party proved numerous gains for the Rexists in yesterday's provincial council elections. The provincial councilors will elect the senate.

The Rexists won the 70 council seats, all at the expense of older parties. The Catholics had 224 and the Socialists 221. They gained 21 seats in the chamber in last month's voting and erpect to have 15 in the senate.

Socialists have assailed the Rexists, led by "The Peacock," Leon Degrelle, as a Fascist force.

On the Air Today

Aside from the fact that the G. O. P. convention in truth gets under way today, the most interesting sidelight is Columbia's engagement of Dr. Salo Finkelstein, termed the world's fastest calculator, to tabulate the voting on the matters before the sessions. The doctor's mathematical wizardry was employed four years ago during C. B. S. broadcasts of Presidential returns. The human comptometer computed the returns more quickly than an entire battery of machines!

WJSV schedule for today: 11 a. m.—Opening session; 4—Earl C. Smith, on "Agriculture and the Platform;" 8:30—Senator Steiwer's keynote address, session to end about 10:15.

WMAL: 10:30 a. m.—Convention opening—Steiwer keynote address.

WRC: 10:30 a. m.—Convention opening—Steiwer keynote address.

Last winter, when most of the citizenry in this part of the country could not or did not listen to Jack Hylton and his Continental Revue, I was sitting each Sunday evening with my trusty radio set tuned to WBBM of WJR (Chicago and Detroit, respectively), listening to this versatile group of British artists in their original full-hour show under the auspices of a Middle West concern.

And it was with considerable interest that I watched their air show from the Press Club auditorium Sunday night and again the show at the Earle. From beginning to end it's a grand hour of entertainment. You sophisticates who want that something different get it when Peggy Dell sings an Irish song. Pat O'Malley recites the adventures of Albert and the fierce lion, Wallace; when Alec Templeton gives his impressions (and impressions they are, due to his blindness) of everything from Bing Crosby meeting Louis Armstrong in a music shop to the sounds greeting him as he entered the music conservatory where he studied piano, and the smartest orchestral arrangements in many a day.

And that would be omitting the Merry Macs, Miss Neeld and all the others who provide a great show.

Backstage at the Earle, O'Malley admitted that he was going home for a vacation in a month due to first hand contact with the so-called American fast pace. He also tells me that Lyon & Healy, a music house in Chicago, sells his Albert and Small records and an order goes westward forthwith.

O'Malley also confirmed the dreadful impression we Americans get of English radio. It's just about as we hear it from the Empire stations at night by short wave although the day programs, under different direction, are more springhtly and entertaining.

I gather this group of Britishers will be back on your dials by the time another fall and winter season rolls around and I hope they begin in the East and stay in the East another year.

El Gary: Who got his radio start in Washington (teamed on one series with Helen Ault, heard in "Country Hi-Jinks" and other WRC shows) is guest of "Welcome Valley." WRC, at 7:30. Baltimore night highlights a song reminiscent of June, WJSV, at 6:30.

Frank Morgan: Distinguished film actor; guests with Ben Bernie, WMAL, at 8.

Tonight was to have been made a radio farewell for Eddie Dowling and Ray Dooley in their last "Revue" with Benny Goodman and his orchestra—but the doings from Cleveland make their air departure more abrupt. This show and also the Fred Waring show from WJSV have been canceled to make way for the keynote address.

Last note on convention broadcasting: Reinald Werrenrath, baritone, has been selected as soloist for night session, immediately preceding Senator Steiwer's address.

The New Two-Way Three Bid.

For many years I, as well as a host of other experts, have realized that hands containing "ready-made" suits (requiring no support in trumps from partner), with and without side strength, should be given special bidding treatment. The question was: What treatment? How to shut out the opponents when your hand was defensively weak and, at the same time, not jeopardize one's own slam opportunities? And here is the solution.

Any opening suit bid of three shall be convinced a two-way bid. Thus, two vastly different types of hand should be opened in the same way. For instance, let us consider these two hands:

Spade A. 4, heart 7. 3; diamond A. K. Q. J. 8, 6; club 10, 8, 5; spade 6; heart K. Q.; diamond K. J. 10, 9, 8, 5, 3, 2; club 8, 3.

Using the new two-way bid, each of these hands should be opened with a bid of three diamonds. Obviously, it is vital for partner to determine which type actually is held. And he will be told, but first he must do his part by responding properly, according to his holding. Responses to a two-way bid are as follows:

1. With any hand containing less than one honor trick or less than three small or two fair trumps (Jx) with a singleton, the responding hand will pass.

2. Holding one honor trick, or with three small or two fair trumps and a singleton, responder must give a single raise.

3. With no raise or proper takeout (see below), but holding one honor trick or more, the responder bids three no trump.

4. Take out a minor suit three bid in a biddable five card or longer major suit and one or more honor tricks.

5. Take out a major suit three bid into four of a lower ranking suit (or bid three diamonds over three clubs or three spades over three hearts) only with a five card or longer suit headed by AK, AQ, or KQ and not less than 2½ honor tricks in the hand.

(All suit take-outs are forcing for one round.)

6. Jump to four of a major over three of a minor (or four spades over three hearts) only with a solid suit.

7. Respond with four no trump with about four honor tricks, including at least two aces and the king of the bid suit, and no five-card suit containing two of the three top honors.

And now we come to the crux of the situation, which is: How can partner tell whether the opening bidder has a strong or a weak hand?

He can tell by the opening bidder's next action! Space will not permit me to outline this today and, therefore, I shall continue the subject in tomorrow's article. Meanwhile, here is a hand that illustrates the shut-out value of a three bid:

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

NORTH
♠ Q 7 4
♥ Q 3 6
♣ J 9 6 5 4 2

WEST
♠ 9 6 3
♥ K J 7 5
♦ A J 9 4
♣ A 3

EAST
♠ None
♥ A 10 4 3 2
♦ K 10 7 6 5 3

SOUTH
♠ A K J 10 8 5 2
♦ Q 8
♣ K Q 7

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3 spades	Pass	4 spades	Pass
Pass	Pass

If West were certain that South's bid were a confession of weakness, he might risk life and limb by interjecting a desperate take-out double. With the possibility of South, as well as North, having a strong hand, none but the most foolhardy in the West position would do anything but pass. The same comments apply to a bid by East after North's raise to four spades. If East should find partner with a poor hand, or without a "fit," he would be slaughtered in a five bid.

Obviously, East and West could make a slam by guessing the heart Queen, but instead, South walks off with his four spade contract, and rubber.

Tuesday is ,expert's day in Ely Culbertson's column. Write your bridge comments, suggestions, and interesting hands to him, care of this paper. For questions, remember to inclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Today's Question.

Question: With a 60 score, is an opening two bid in a suit forcing?

Answer: Yes, for one round of bidding.

Mrs. Tomlinson Elected to Head Science Church

War Relief Worker Named at Annual Meeting of World Body.

By the Associated Press.

Botson, June 8.—Mrs. Elizabeth Cadwell Tomlinson, of Boston, became president of the Christian Science Mother Church.

Her election to succeed Dr. Frank C. Colby was announced at the annual meeting of representatives of the denomination from every State in the Union and many foreign countries. Approximately 6,000 Christian Scientists were present.

An appeal to Christian Scientists to work for world peace, and reports of church officers on activities throughout the world marked the meeting.

The new president is a native of Byron, Wis. She was graduated from St. Helen's Hall and has been a member of the church for some years. At the outbreak of the World War she was in London and later in war relief activities under Mrs. Herbert Hoover.

In her address to the annual meeting Mrs. Tomlinson declared developments in the world corroborate and fulfill the prophecy of Mary Baker Eddy, founder of the church, that "war will end when nations are ripe for progress."

"It is the life of men, not the death of men, that determined the peace of nations," Mrs. Tomlinson said.

The department of branches and practitioners reported the addition of 22 new churches and eight new university organizations, making a total of 2,751 branches of the Mother Church and 55 college and university organizations.

Edward L. Ripley was re-elected church treasurer and Ezra W. Palmer, clerk of the church.

William M. Bartlett, secretary to trustees under the will of Mary Baker Eddy, reported expenditure of more than $150,000 during the year to "extend and promote the religion of Christian Science."

Included among the expenditures were funds in Germany for assisting Christian Scientists who, he said, would otherwise have been unable to receive authorized literature following certain restrictions made last August by the German government.

Roosevelt Vetoes R.O.T.C. Air Bill

The McSwain bill providing for establishment of an R. O. T. C. for the air to train young men from 17 to 24 years for service in event of a national emergency was vetoed yesterday afternoon by President Roosevelt.

At about the same time there was signed by Speaker Bankhead yesterday, the new "triple-provision" Army aviation act providing for an increase of 1,350 Army Air Corps reserve officers which is expected to be approved by the President.

"The War Department has reported that there is no immediate military necessity for such an organization and that its costs would be out of proportion to the results looked for," explained the President in vetoing the former measure.

"In view of the many demands to produce the most effective air defense at a minimum cost, any expenditures which are not present military necessities should be postponed," his veto message continued.

The new air reserve bill, which has no connection with the vetoed bill, and which is assured approval by the President, provides first for the addition of 1,350 Army Air Corps reserve officer to be trained for five-year periods and to be paid a bonus of $500 at the conclusion of their training; second, for a redefinition of the term "flying officer" and third, for a liberalization of the powers of the President and War Department to promote air officers temporarily to higher ranks.

13 Held for Trial After Clan Hearing

Detroit, June 8 (AP).—Thirteen men accused of the Black Legion slaying of Charles A. Poole were held for trial on both murder and kidnaping charges at the conclusion of their examination today in common pleas court.

Referring to Poole's death the night of May 12 at the hands ofa mob of Black Legion terrorists who accused him falsely of beating his wife, Judge Ralph W. Liddy said:

"This is a very sinister spectacle of an organized group attempting to usurp the function of government for what the group believed an offense. It has all the elements of a planned crime, clearly premeditated by at least some of these men."

The order holding Dayton Dean, confessed Black Legion trigger man, and his 12 codefendants for trial in the Poole execution came after two hours of argument in which the defense held that the State had not linked all the group with the abduction or subsequent slaying of the young WPA worker.

Missing Girl, Fearing Police, Takes Poison

Landon Burke, Alexandria, Is Found by Officer in Charlottesville.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., June 8.—Landon Mason Burke, 14, banker's daughter who disappeared from her home in Alexandria Saturday afternoon, was reunited with her socially-prominent parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Taylor Burke, at Martha Jefferson Hospital here today.

The girl, who slipped away from her home in what she now calls "a spirit of adventure," was taken to the hospital this morning after she had swallowed poison. A policeman recognized her as she played with a group of school children and attempted to take her to the police station for questioning.

Her condition, after an examination, was reported excellent, aside from sunburn and heel blisters she suffered from hiking in and around Charlottesville today and yesterday.

Mrs. Burke said she expects to take her daughter to their home in Alexandria on Thursday. Until then Landon will remain in the hospital. Burke returned home late this afternoon.

The girl declared she was on her way to board a train for Alexandria when Officer W. J. McCauley recognized her from descriptions broadcast by Alexandria police.

She was so terrified at the prospect of being taken to the police station, she told her parents, that she went to a nearby drug store and bought the poison while the officer was telephoning his report from a filling station. She swallowed it in the filling station rest room.

At the time the policeman first saw her she was eating two ice cream cones, one in each hand. Hospital attendants said the ice cream undoubtedly played an important part in throwing off effects of the poison.

Landon told her mother she left home Saturday because she was lonely and was filled with the spirit of adventure. A schoolmate at St. Catherine's School for Girls in Richmond who had been visiting her had left for her home in California that morning. Mrs. Burke believes it was the loneliness following her friend's departure that induced Landon to run away.

Dressed in slacks and polo shirt, the girl strolled up and down the streets of Alexandria after leaving her home at 4:30 p. m., according to the story she told her parents yesterday. Late that night she boarded a train and reached Charlottesville early Sunday.

She started to hitch-hike to the Blue Ridge Mountains, but stopped in Crozet, 15 miles west of Charlottesville, to play with the Wood children, members of a prominent family there. Her new-found friends said she spent the night at their home.

Early today, Landon, according to her own history of her adventures, hiked back to Charlottesville, intending to board a train for Alexandria. Near the University of Virginia she bought two ice cream cones and joined in the play of some children. It was there that Officer McCauley found her.

Landon chided her mother today for worrying about her and said her parents should have known "I'm able to take care of myself."

Her father is head of the banking firm of Burke & Herbert, with offices in Alexandria.

Police here were inclined to doubt the girl's statement that she made the trip from Alexandria by train. The hospital said she apparently had not been harmed by other persons.

Dern Rebukes Army Officer On Civilian Job

Lieut. Col. Hoffman Escapes Trial; Held Plane Post 5 Years Ago.

Lieut. Col. Edward L. Hoffman, who was awarded the Collier Aviation Trophy in 1927 for his work in parachute development, was sharply reprimanded yesterday by Secertary of War Dern for "concealing from his military superiors" his connection with a private aircraft and parachute company.

Hoffman escaped court-martial only because such a trial was barred by the statute of limitations, a War Department statement said, the events having occurred fore than five years ago.

The Collier Trophy, which is awarded annually for the greatest achievement in aviation during the year, was given Hoffman by President Coolidge for his invention of the triangular parachute, now being used by several European countries and by the United States Army Air Corps for experimental purposes.

It was this parachute invention, it is understood, that indirectly led to his rebuke yesterday. At the time, Hoffman was believed to have sold his parachute invention rights outright to a new parachute company that was set up in Cincinnati, Ohio. It was his connection with this firm that led to a War Department investigation.

Three years ago Hoffman was exonerated of a charge of improper conduct on the basis of his own testimony. A reinvestigation of the case last March revealed that this exoneration "had been wholly unwarranted," the statement said.

"As a result of the reinvestigation," continued the statement, "it was concluded Lieut. Col. Hoffman had materially assisted in the promotion and organizatio.. of Safe Aircraft, Inc., of Cincinnati, Ohio, for his personal benefit and that he had given deceptive and misleading testimony during the investigation of his case."

In his reprimand to Hoffman, Dern expressed "complete disapprobation of conduct on your part which seriously compromises your character and standing as an officer, the full and proper penalty for which you now escape solely because your trial is barred by the statute of limitations."

Hoffman entered the Army service as a private in the Infantry in 1909. During the war he became interested in aviation and ever since has been one of the Army's leading parachute experts. He introduced several changes in the standard circular parachute used by the Army.

Following his invention of the triangular parachute and the award of the Collier Trophy, he conducted a number of experiments in an attempt to develop a parachute that would land an airplane after it was disabled in flight. So far these experiments have been unfruitful.

Hoffman now is assigned to the Air Corps Tactical School at Maxwell Field, Ala.

Special Vote Barred On Byrns' Successor

Nashville, Tenn., June 8 (AP).—Gov. Hill McAlister said tonight the Attorney General had advised him that "under the facts in the case" he was without authority to call a special election to fill the unexpired term in Congress of the late Speaker Joseph W. Byrns.

Richard M. Atkinson, of Nashville, one of the 19 who have been qualified to seek nomination as Byrns' successor in the August Democratic primary, had suggested that a special election be called and the Speaker's widow elected without opposition to serve out his term.

Since the present session of Congress wil lbe over before a special election could be held, the Attorney General advised the Governor that it could not be called.
